Hink pink answers final explosion

is nothing better than a brain booster, which is also fun. Hink Pinks are word puzzles that use two-word clues to lead to a rhyming solution. Whether children solve puzzles or create their own, they expand their vocabulary, practice rhyme skills and discover how fun word games can be. This activity strengthens literacy by making children think creatively about languages. When children create or solve a Hink Pink, they increase their vocabulary, improve their understanding of parts of speech, and develop an ability to construct rhymes — all skills that will help them write. Making up puzzles also encourages them to think critically and creatively because they have to develop the problem all the way through from start to. And while Hink Pinks can be tricky at first when kids get the beat, they'll be hooked in all the fun and pointless ways they can play with words. Paper and Pencil Thesaurus An Egg Timer or Stopwatch, if desired Before you begin, explain what a Hink Pink is: A word puzzle that uses a two-word clue to lead to a rhyming answer. It is best to give several examples to illustrate the concept. Here are a few you can use to get kids' creative juices flowing: Clue: Tight Blanket Solution: Snug Carpet Clue: Simple Locomotive Solution: Plain Train Clue: Empty Seat Solution: Just Chair Clue: Steak Steals Solution: Beef Thief: Funny Roll Solution: Fun Bun: Cluey Paws Solution: Sweet Feet Clue: Free Oak Solution: Free Oak Solution: Free Wood Make Sure the Child Has The Hang Of The Game by asking him or her to come up with one as a trial. You may notice that it takes some trial and error for the child to get it just right. For example, the child may pose the clue of the plane up when the intended solution is fly high. Explain that while up can be a good choice for high, planes may not be the best choice for flying. A plane actually flies, but ideally you're looking for synonyms — words that have the same or almost the same meaning. It is also a good idea that the words are the same part of the speech. In this case, planes are a noun, and planes are a verb. So what could be a better choice for flying? A good alternative is soar. So a better clue for flying high may be soaring up. A thesaurus can be a useful tool if a child is stuck while trying to think about clues. A thesaurus is a list of synonyms. You can use a thesaurus in book form, or if you have a computer with Internet access, an online version as a thesaurus on Merriam-Webster Online, or Thesaurus.com. And if you or the child you're working with needs a rundown of those parts of the speech, you can also look at Wacky Web Tales: Parts of Voice Help or Revolution: English parts of the speech. When the child has a clear understanding of the game, ask him or her to come up with five Hink Pinks. Have the child write the tracks on one piece of paper and the answers to another. How you play the game depends on how many people play, whether you choose to make it a friendly contest and also where you are. For example, in the car, the child can just call the clues and have the other passengers guess the answers aloud. At home, you can make it more of an organized game. For example, you and the child (or a group of children) can each write down five Hink Pink tracks and then exchange papers. Then you can use an egg timer to get the baby solving puzzles in a race against the clock, or use a stopwatch to see who can solve them all in the shortest time. Once the game has been played, the child has to go back and take another look at the Hink Pinks he or she created. Mestricate every word of the two words traces with the part of the speech it represents. Then ask the child if he or she notices any special pattern that keeps appearing with the words. Count the number of tracks that used an adjective with a noun, a byword with a verb, and a noun with a noun. Ask the child why he or she thinks that other parts of the speech — pronouns, conjunctions, prepositions, and heckling — don't seem to work so well for Hink Pinks. Can it be harder to find synonyms for these types of words? Make the game even more challenging! Try playing the game using two-syllable rhymes solutions (these are called Hinky Pinkies) or even three syllable ones (Hinkety Pinketies). Here are some Hinky Pinkies: Clue: Fake Horse Solution: Fake Pony Clue: Sea Cream Solution: Ocean Lotion Clue: Humorous Cash Solution: Fun Money Here Are Some Hinkety Pinketies (Because These Are More Challenging, They Often Require More Comprehensive Tracks): Clue: Two Drums Talking Solution: Percussion Discussion Clue: Remember the Last Month of The Year Solution: Remember December Clue: A Game Involving Fired Clay Solution : lottery pottery Grades K - 12 | Student Interactive | Writing PoetryThis online tool allows students to learn about and write diamante poems. Grades 5 to 10 | Activity & ProjectLet children practice using different types of words in a fill-in-the-blank-story game before making their own glossary for a magnetic poetry set.
