Taiwan Semi and Qualcomm have big cap stocks to watch. Take a deep breath, get ready, the New Year is just around the corner, and while we're all ready to celebrate - just in principle, because getting out of 2020 is reason enough for joy - let's also look at where we are and where we're going. There is a growing optimism, triggered by the availability of COVID vaccines and the potential they give for a return to normal on major streets across the country. Finally, a chance to see the lockdown and social demaragement systems really come to an end and in the near future. There's a real chance that by the end of a 2021, John Q. Public might be getting back on the feet.Combine that wall street's current ebullience, with stock trading in or near all-time high levels, and we're looking at the prospect of a banner year. The return to local normality will be great - but we also have the prospect of a general rising market. According to Dubravko Lakos-Bujas, the US's leading equity strategist, JPMorgan, the shares face one of the best backgrounds in years. The risks associated with global trade tensions, political uncertainty and the pandemic are disappearing. At the same time, liquidity conditions remain extremely supportive and there is a very favourable interest rate environment. It's a Goldilocks environment for risky devices. Lakos-Lush does not shy away from quantifying his optimism. He forecasts a profit of as much as 19% on S&Amp;T; P 500, saying that the index will reach 4000 at the beginning of 2021 and reach a high of as much as 4400 in the later part of the year. By transforming the prospects of JM's stock analysts into concrete recommendations for three shares that seem particularly attractive. We ran the trio through the TipRanks database to see what Wall Street analysts have to say. Sotera Health (SHC)Sotera Health occupies a unique niche in the healthcare industry, through which its affiliates, a range of safety-oriented support businesses for healthcare providers. These services include sterilization procedures, laboratory testing and consulting services – and their importance is immediately clear. Sotera boasts more than 5,800 health care service customers in more than 50 countries around the world. While not a new company - two branches have been in business since the 1930s and 40s - Sotera is new to the stock markets, having retained its IPO only this past November. The first bid was deemed successful, $1.2 billion on the sale of 53.6 million shares. Earlier this month, Sotera announced that it had used most of the IPO capital to pay off $1.1 billion in debt. This included a $341 million first lien term loan, as well as $770 million in aggregate capital issued at the time of its collateraled notes. The move allowed Sotera to increase its revolving credit line to $347.5 million. The facility is not currently being withdrawn. Among the bulls is JPM analyst Tycho Peterson, who rates SHC overweight (i.e. Buy) as well as an annual price target of $35. This figure suggests a 31% upward climb to current levels. (To watch Peterson's past, click here) SHC is uniquely positioned to benefit from healthy end-market growth and favorable pricing dynamics, Peterson noted. Given the diversified operating platform, sticky multi-year contracts, effective pricing strategy, significant barriers to entry and high regulatory oversight, we project ~9% sales growth, higher utilization leadership with continued expansion [and] robust FCF support for ongoing de-exploitation, giving us positive both near- and long-term prospects. The Wall Street analyst panel is firmly behind Peterson in this one - in fact, the 7 most recent reviews are unanimous buys, making the analyst's onsens a strong buy. SHC is currently trading at $26.75, and its $32.50 average price target means an upside of 21.5% by the end of 2021. (See SHC inventory analysis from TipRanks) Myovant Sciences (MYOV)Let's stay in the health industry and check out Myovant Sciences. This clinical research biopharma company focuses on major issues with reproductive system disease in men and women. Specifically, Myovant works to develop treatments for uterine fibrosis, endometriosis, and prostate cancer. Myovant pipeline currently features Relugolix as a treatment for fibrosis and endometriosis. The drug is phase 3 trial of the latter and has been submitted by the NDA to the former. Also in the pipeline, and linked to reproductive health, is MVT-602, a new drug designed to enhance egg m ripening and aid in vitro fertilization. In addition, Myovant announced this month that Relugolix has been FDA approved - under the brand name Orgovyx - for the treatment of advanced prostate cancer. The drug is the first, and currently only, oral gonadotropin-releasing hormone (GnRH) Receptor Antagonist for the disease. Orgovyx is expected to enter the market in January 2021.Analyst Eric Joseph, in his comment on this herd at JPM, describes how he was fascinated by Relugolix based on its clinical and commercial potential as a leading tool for relugolix in the treatment of endometriosis and uterine fibroids, as well as men treating advanced prostate cancer. The analyst added: For women's health, we believe all phase 3 data to date de-risk the likelihood of relugolix approval fibroma and endometriosis – trade opportunities that are under-reflected at current levels. Furthermore, we see an attractive commercial setting for relugolix in the treatment of advanced prostate cancer as an oral LHRH alternative with differentiated CV risk profile. These comments support Joseph's overweight (i.e. Buy) rating on MYOV, and the $30 price target represents an upward target of 31% over the next 12 months. (To see Joseph's past, click here) Overall, strong buy's analyst on-the-pulse rating on Myovant comes from 5 reviews, and the breakdown is clearly for bulls: 4-to-1 alongside Buy versus Moon. The share's $22.80 share price and $36.40 average price target give a powerful upside possible of ~59%. (See myov stock analysis tipranks) Metropolitan Bank Holding (MCB)In its third stock, it will change lanes to health care funding, where Metropolitan Bank Holding operates - through its subsidiary, Metropolitan Commercial Bank - as a full-service bank for business, entrepreneurship, and personal clients in the mid-market segment. The bank's services include business lending, cash management, deposits, electronic banking, personal checks and prepaid cards. In a year that was difficult for most of us, MCB managed to post steadily increasing revenues and solid revenues. The bank's top line increased from $33 million in Q1 to $36 million in Q3. EPS was stronger at $1.27 per share, up 30%. The profit comes as the bank gives forward guidance of $153.9 million in total revenue for next year, which - if met - reflects a 22% gain in 2020. While MCB's financial performance shows continued gains, the stock's revaluation did not follow suit. The stock was only partially reimbursed for the losses it took last winter at the height of the Crown crisis and is currently down 26% this year. Watching the New York banking scene at JPM, analyst Steven Alexopoulos notes general difficulties in the commercial real estate loan industry - an important part of the MCB portfolio - due to ongoing pandemic issues. In this environment, he considers the Metropolitan Bank the right choice. We're not as sullen as most of us in the prospects for new york real estate. Having witnessed many cycles in NYC, the time to buy was when the herd was running the other way. In recent cycles, MCB has been an outperformer of loan indicators in terms of that loan portfolio relative to the coverage group, Alexopoulos noted. Alexopoulos adds to explain another key strength of MCB's loan portfolio: In a low interest rate environment, MCB stands in a better position than peers to withstand NIM headwinds with 59% of MCB loans at fixed rates and 67% of remaining variable rate loans flooring to protect lower short-term interest rates ... To this end, Alexopoulos rates MCB overweight (i.e. Buy) as well as a $50 Target. Should the target be met, investors will pocket profits of 43% in the coming year. (To watch Alexopoulos' past, click here) Some kits fly under the radar, and MCB is one of those. Alexopoulos is the only recent analyst review of this company and is decidedly positive. Here's what the funds and technical analysis say about buying Nio shares now. The House ignored its $2,000 payout call, not $600. What's next? 2020 is a good year to give away only a very generous, uniform gift and property tax credit, an expert suggested. U.S. and Canadian governments provide many of the same types of services for those looking for retirement, but the subtle differences between the two countries are worth noting. Speculation about an Apple car continues to run rampant. Goldman Sachs just took an excellent estimate of how much money Apple would make if it enters the electric vehicle market. Investor Business DailyLockheed Martin stock forming a base as the defense giant acquires a top developer of space and missile technology. For Nikola (NKLA), things are going from bad to worse. For the kit that caught fire in the first half of the year, the electric truck maker's coming down was brutal. A series of incidents - alleged fraud committed by founder Trevor Milton, following his resignation, severely underwhelming deals with General Motors - sent investors to the exit gates. Now it looks like even the trash wants nothing to do with Nikola.On on Wednesday, the company announced that the plan for designing and constructing BEV garbage waste trucks for waste collection company Republic Services has collapsed. The company claimed that the cost of building the trucks would be higher than expected and would take too long after both parties concluded that the construction of the waste truck using Nikola Tre as a base would not work. The market, obviously, has not liked the recent downturn and shares have fallen by nearly 20% in the past two trading sessions. Deutsche Bank analyst Emmanuel Rosner calls the disappointment the fact that RSG was Nikola Tre's only external customer to be announced so far and was deemed to provide some kind of external validation of its economy. However, leading to a positive turn in the procedure, the analyst considers The deal severance can work in Nikola's favor. Waste is waste would have required large expenses that would not necessarily be transferable to other core business activities and TAM would be relatively small, the analyst noted. That said, Nikola has other issues to deal with; The analyst is concerned about the development of Nikola BEV's truck, which is expected to be at the end of 2021. Although the first trucks were manufactured and are currently in the testing phase, no customers have yet been announced and Nikola's farm doctrine could be unfavourable for years. Overall, Rosner summed up: We will remain on the sidelines of the NKLA and will carefully study the milestones expected to be announced in 1H21, including a potential hydrogen infrastructure partner. Accordingly, the analyst prices for NKLA shares hold, although you might as well have said Buy - because the $26 price target means ~88% upside at current levels. (Click here to see Rosner's past) Rosner's colleagues say Nikola's worth a punt. The average price target is a little higher than Rosner's and at $26.67 it means a gain of 92.5%. All in all, the stock has a moderate buy consensus rating based on 3 buys, 4 holds and 1 Sell. (Bloomberg) -- U.S.-listed shares in Alibaba Group Holding are the most concerned about alleged monopolistic practices by China's e-commerce company. Affiliate Ant Group Co., the other pillar of billionaire Jack Ma's Internet empire, was also summoned to a high-level meeting over financial regulation. The pressure today is central to China's broader efforts to curb the increasingly influential internet sphere: Draft anti-monopoly rules released in November gave the government wide lee way to discourage entrepreneurs who until recently enjoyed unusual freedom to expand their empires. The Alibaba investigation is a that the wind has shifted, Bloomberg Intelligence said in a one-off Note. The risk, analyst Vey-Sern Ling wrote, is that business operations face long-term headwinds as a result of such moves. The stock fell 13% in its biggest one-day slump record. The decline took Alibaba to its lowest level since July, and the stock fell 30% from its October peak. Roughly 141 million shares have changed hands, the most for a meeting since its debut in 2014. Alibaba said in a statement that it was cooperating with regulators during the investigation and that its operations remained normal. Once hailed as drivers of economic prosperity and symbols of the country's technological prowess, Alibaba and rivals like Tencent Holdings Ltd. face growing pressure from regulators after hoarding hundreds of millions of users and gaining influence in almost every aspect of everyday life in China. This is clearly an escalation of concerted efforts to curb the Jack Ma empire, which symbolized China's new too-large-to-no organizations, said Dong Ximiao, a researcher at the Zhongguancun Internet Finance Institute. The Chinese authorities want to see a smaller, less dominant and more appropriate company. Regulators including the central bank and banking watchdog separately will bring affiliate Ant to a meeting aimed at driving home ever stricter financial regulations that now pose a threat to the growth of the world's largest online financial services company. Ant said in a statement the official WeChat account will learn and meet all requirements. Today, the flamboyant co-founder of Alibaba and Ant, has all but disappeared from the public eye since Ant's first public offering last month derailed. As of early December, the man most identified with the meteoric rise of China Inc. had advised the government to stay in the country, a person familiar with the matter said. Mom is not on the verge of the personal downfall of people who know the situation said. His very public rebuke is more of a warning Beijing has lost patience with the outsize power of technology moguls, increasingly perceived as a threat to political and financial stability President Xi Jinping charges most. Alibaba slipped 8 percent in Hong Kong to a five-month low on Thursday. Asia's largest company after Tencent led losses among China's Internet sector leaders since Ant's IPO is yanked, taking a total toll of about $200 billion. Tencent and internet services giant Meituan finished more than 2.6% lower, while SoftBank Group Corp., Alibaba's largest shareholder, sank China prepares to roll out new anti-monopoly regulations, country leaders said few how hard they plan to hold him down or why they decided to act now. China's internet ecosystem - long protected from competition by google and Facebook enthusiasts - is dominated by two companies, Alibaba and Tencent, through a labyrinth-based investment network that includes the vast majority of the country's start-ups in arenas from what to digital financing. Their patrons are also preparing a new generation of titans, including food and travel giant Meituan and Didi Chuxin - China's Uber. Those who thrive outside their orbit, the largest of the TikTok-owner ByteDance Ltd., are rare. The house that Jack Ma built on China's own creation: Tim CulpanA's anti-monopoly rules now threatens to upset that status quo with a series of possible outcomes, a benign scenario of fines for breaking up with industry leaders. Some analysts predict there will be a raid, but it is targeted. They point to the language of regulations that suggest a strong emphasis on online commerce, from forced exclusive agreements with merchants called Pick One of Two to algorithm-based prices to prioritize new users. The regulations explicitly warns against the use of competitors. But beijing's various agencies seem to be coordinating their efforts - a bad sign for the internet sector. There's nothing that the Chinese Communist Party doesn't control, and anything that seems to be gyrating off the track in any way is going to pull back very quickly, said Alex Capri, a Singapore-based researcher at the Hinrich Foundation.Read more: Down $290 billion, China Tech Investors Mull Nightmare ScenariosA campaign against Alibaba and its peers came to high gear in November after Ma famously attacked Chinese regulators in a public speech about lagging behind the times. Market supervisors then suspended Ant's IPO - the world's largest for $35 billion - while the anti-monopoly watchdog soon after threw markets to the wind with its draft legislation. The People's Daily warned on Thursday that the fight against alleged monopolies is now a top priority. Anti-monopoly has become an urgent issue that affects all issues, he said in a commentary that coincided with the probe's announcement. Wild growth in the markets must be curbed by law, he added. The mouthpiece of the Communist Party said in a commentary Friday that Chinese Internet companies should view the investigation of Alibaba as an opportunity to improve awareness of fair competition and anti-monopoly practices. The chances that Ant will be able to revive the massive stock market next year are looking ever slimmer as China overhauls rules for the fintech industry, which in recent years has flourished as an alternative to traditional state Lending. China has reportedly set up a joint task force separately to oversee Ant, which is and development committee, the financial system regulator, as well as the various departments of the central bank and other regulators. The group is in regular contact with Ant to collect data and other materials, study its restructuring and other rules for the fintech industry. China has streamlined much of the bureaucracy, making it easier for various regulatory bodies to cooperate, said Mark Tanner, managing director of Shanghai-based consulting firm China Skinny.
