Stihl leaf blower parts online

Photo: istockphoto.com Fall is full of football, hot apple cider and pumpkin pies. And the leaves. A few, many and many pages. The leaf blower can do a quick job this fall on chores as a traditional rake. But it's worth brushing up on some advice from experts before you start. RELATED: 15 tricks to know if you hate Fall Yard Work Select the right leaf blower for your size yard. There are many options for leaf blowers on the market, so how does one narrow the field? Think about the size and shape of your yard, starters, and how many pages tend to fall during the season. Small factories or those with bright leaf accumulation may gain less power, perhaps even a wire. Medium to large factories that see more fallen leaves require more power and can benefit from the free reign given batteries and gas tanks. Remember: While a larger model may be more powerful, you will probably also be more clumsy. Our shopping guide for the best page blowers recommends a number of top-rated options and helps you choose the right tool. Develop a smart strategy for page blower use. The leaf blower is most effective at collecting most of the grass leaves into large piles, removed with a present or by hand. Don't expect to shoot every last leaf off the lawn with a leaf blower. It drives you crazy. Try hard not to be too picky. You can follow with the leaves of the rake at the end to get stragglers. The vacuum mode of the leaf blower is best reserved for smaller and less accessible workplaces where the sheet rake would be difficult to use. Use it for leaves that are trapped around rocks, under gardens, or dense spots around your house. It's also convenient for getting sheets out of your deck, or removing small amounts of dirt and grass clippings from your car. Photo: istockphoto.com calm or no wind. If you can, remove the leaves on the day when the wind blows in the direction you want to go, or on a day that is still there. You will find that doing otherwise is seriously harmful. If possible, wait for the wet leaves to dry. Dry leaves are easier to remove from the blower than wet sheets. Test the moisture of the leaf cane by directing the blower to its base. If it barely budges, it may be better to do another chores instead and come back the next day. It's all in tech. A plan where you want your leaves to finally land. Place the present in the designated place so that you can drag the leaves into a compost heap when you're done. If you blow them directly into a wooded area or compost pile, it will be sections. Collect your leaves from your designated spot and then separate the 6' part sheets at once, blowing them to your final resting place. Work in one direction only. This will help prevent you from blowing leaves in the area you have already worked out in. Keep and point the front end from the ground at a low angle. Use smooth back and forth movement when you walk slowly when the leaf blower is in front of you. Photo: istockphoto.com Gear to use a leaf blower safely. Do not forget to wear eye and ear protection when blowing leaves. Small sticks, leaves and other debris can be easily blown into the eye, and leaf blowers generate between 70 and 75 decibels, which are not only considered annoyingly loud by some, but can damage hearing after prolonged exposure. With little practice, a leaf blower can make you that post-leaf-stripping celebratory beer faster than rake. 1/11 AdShooter/Getty Images A page blower can keep your yard page-free, but it can do so much! We highlight some of our favorite page blower attachments, but before purchasing any make sure your choice is compatible with your blower. Check the brand and model number with compatibility notes to get attachments. Be sure to save your receipt just in case that a universal attachment isn't quite as universal after all. 4/11 via amazon.com If you absolutely hate emptying collection bags, you can even choose a disposable leaf collection of bags. Just fill them up and drop them straight into the trash. While cheaper and less environmentally friendly in the long run than reusable bags, they can be a good choice if you are dealing with particularly unpleasant material such as wet or rotten leaves. Shop Now 5/11 via amazon.com Of course, if you're really serious about removing the collection of bags, consider an attachment like the Worx Leaf Collection System. Designed to fit almost all leaf blower/vacuum combos, this ingenious system creates a sweeper that deposits leaves directly in the waste container. No more emptying countless little bags! Shop Now 7/11 via amazon.com The leaf blower's nozzle shape has a direct impact on its performance. Just as an adjustable stream garden nozzle is better suited for different tasks, so is the end of the blower. Round nozzles put air in a wider area, while flat ends, like the Ego Power+ Flat Nozzle, are better suited to maximize distribution, making them ideal for matching light, dry sheets. Please note that this nozzle is specifically for Ego blowers. But before pulling out your wallet, check what the diameter of your wet dry vac hose is. Some shop vacuum nozzles are ideal for suitable leaf blowers. There are no uniform sizes, so it's worth checking! Shop Now 8/11 via amazon.com Can't enough spray end options? You're our type of DIYer! Using a leaf blower involves many repetitive wrist movements as you sweep the leaves in front of your path. Toro Oscillation is a brilliant sheet solution that uses the blower's own power to change the direction of the air. You just keep walking and the nozzle doesn't You. Shop Now 10/11 via amazon.com If you've had a backpack leaf blower for a few years, bring it back for a more comfortable ride with a set of new harness straps. This two-packs Echo blower backpack straps makes using your leaf blower more enjoyable. Similar products are available in most other brands of blowers, so keep your eyes open and don't be afraid to upgrade your blower straps and frame. Shop Now 11/11 via amazon.com Finally, here's an attachment that doesn't go to your blower, but rather a blower that goes with your string trimmer! Offering up to 500 cubic feet per minute (CFM), this TrimmerPlus blower attachment is a female-capable string trimmers for major brands such as Troy-Bilt, Snapper or Ryobi. Since they are available in a variety of designs and prices, it can be difficult to recommend a single leaf blower for all homeowners. With this in mind, we have compiled a list of terrible choices in specific situations. Browse and see if you can spot a page blower that's right for you! 2/9 via homedepot.com Me to start our list of Toro PowerJet F700 ($57). It puts out a staggering 725 CFM (cubic foot per minute) of air, at a maximum speed of 140 mph. The latter is important when moving heavier objects such as dirt or wet, compressed sheets. But with dry leaves or grass clippings, CFM gives a better insight into the power. Either way, Toro is outstanding. The only limitation is the length of your power cord, which is why it is best suited for areas relatively close to your home. Shop Now 3/9 via amazon.com But what to do if you have more square shots to cover? Husqvarna 350BT ($302) offers 690 CFM, many to move huge amounts of pages in short order. And padded shoulder harnesses allow you to work comfortably. This combination makes it a big game for homeowners with large yards and a significant number of pages. According to the manufacturer, the 350BT is also designed to emit low noise levels, allowing you to work without worry in residential areas. It's a great feature. But if you really need a quiet leaf blower, check out the next entry on our list. Shop Now 4/9 via homedepot.com Okal, to be fair, maybe we should do it at least with a loud leaf blower. But regardless of the title, Ryobi Whisper 550 CFM ($179) is a solid champion. Ryobi markets the Whisper Series as the quietest blowers in the industry, running in volume only 59 decibels, they are backing up the hype! In the context, normal conversations are about 60 db, while a typical leaf blower can be as loud as 89 db. You can protect your hearing and avoid annoying neighbors in the Whisper series, but you don't have to give up power – this 40-volt cordless model still puts out a 550 CFM! Shop Now 5/9 via amazon.com If you want an all-in-one blower, then it's worth checking out this WORX WG520 Turbine 600 ($135). Bundled with a gutter cleaning system and a foldable 26-gallon yard trash can, it's a discounted leaf blower. Modular gutter cleaning system provides an 11-foot reach so that you can clean the single-storey gutters from the ground. 7/9 through homedepot.com Topping off the scales for most home users, Beast ($419) offers an eye-popping 1250 CFM. This walk-behind model is designed to move large amounts of leaves over large open areas. Its all metal construction can take a beating, and an adjustable blower allows you to angle the perfect move of leaves and debris. It makes it easy to clean up the fall. Shop Now 8/9 via amazon.com On reverse end of scale, it's hard to beat the value of a Sun Joe 6-Amp Blower ($17) if you only need a leaf blower from time to time. Weighing less than four pounds, this wireless blower puts out a respectable 155 mph/260 CFM. This is a great choice for blowing leaves or lawn clippings off your patio and front steps, as well as drying the car after car wash. And with more than 2,000 five- and four-star reviews on Amazon, it clearly makes a strong impression. Shop Now originally published: September 10, 2020 2020
