Connections: World history promotes the learning and absorption of materials with the following characteristics: structural titles, which are organized by themes and connections, are organized by both an age table and an overarching theme of world history, deepening understanding by connecting regions and periods. Rather than using traditional organizations in ancient, medieval and modern times, the title focuses on an era of regional connection and an era of global connectivity. The unique structure focuses on six different periods of world history and effectively details the importance of global connections in each continuous era. Update! Coverage of early migration to the Western Hemisphere and recent historical developments. Photographs, maps and other visual aids show numerous photographs showing major developments show major historical developments, places and figures, helping students understand world history. Update! The revised map is designed to be easy to use and understand, and this edition of the title contains more than 200 maps. The parentheses pronunciation guide follows the first use of historical names, and the primary source excerpt connects students to historical perspectives, where research guides enhance their understanding of learning and teaching materials NEW! In the review section at the end of the comprehensive chapter, important concepts (highlighted in bold throughout the text of each chapter) and important dates and developments (highlighted in bold throughout the text of each chapter) are also available in MyHistoryLab@MyHistoryLab in the World History Course to learn online, attract students and improve results. Media resources with assignments bring concepts to life and provide students with the opportunity to practice applying what they have learned. Note: This version of MyHistoryLab does not include eText. • Attractive multimediaBased on videos, images, interactive maps and closer looks, students can engage and learn in a visual and interactive way. • Over 100 key topic videos involve students learning about the past. These clips, created by Pearson, depict historians reviewing some of the key historical moments featured in the chapter. Each video comes with a brief introduction to set the stage for the video, and you'll see a brief list of topics students will learn after watching the video. • MyHistoryLibrary eText provides more than 200 commonly assigned primary source documents that students can take notes, highlight, and search within each document. To assist with the context, each primary source document comes with a brief summary. Each document also comes with audio so students can listen to the document read out. • Lighting space provides everything you need to promote better writing in one place. It's a single place to create, track, grade, and provide writing resources for writing assignments, and quickly and easily exchange meaningful, personalized feedback with students. You can make automatic grading, assist grades, and assignments created available in the writing space to determine the level of engagement when evaluating student work. The autograde option allows you to assign writes in large classes without ingly scoring all students' work. And thanks to turnitin's work, writing spaces can check students' work for inappropriate quotes and plagiarism. • Learning Management System (LMS) integration allows the constructor to link to MyLab from the LMS platform. Access MyLab assignments, rosters, and resources, and synchronize MyLab grades with your LMS grade schedule. For students, the new direct single sign-on provides access to all personalized learning MyLab resources that make learning more efficient and effective.
