2018) teller's reports are essential elements of the organization of business or organization finances. They must follow a basic formula, but outside of this formula they are flexible documents that can be changed to meet specific needs. Determination of the starting balance. This is the amount that the organization had at the beginning of the treasury period (usually reports are made every quarter or year). The general format is to place the phrase Starting Balance in the left column, and then paste the amount (for example, 3500.24) without a dollar character in the right column. Determine the cost. What did the organization spend during the Treasury period? Organize costs into clear and easy-to-understand categories like Deliveries or Fundraising, and then describe each individual expense in detail below the category. Define income. Did your organization make any money? If so, place the source of revenue (e.g. Bake Sale) in the left column, and then place the exact amounts on the right (for example, 875.00). Determination of the final balance. The formula for this is Starting Balance minus Cost Plus equals the Final Balance. The ending balance must be in the left column with the total amount on the right. Enter the report. The report must be written on the form of the organisation. The cashiers' report should be centered at the top of the page, below the stationery. Specify the reporting period on the left side of the page. The starting balance, Cost, Income and Ending Balance must be in bold in the left column, listing the corresponding figures below. Sign and add attachments. The full name and position of the treasurer must complete the report. The Treasurer should sign the report and attach copies of all supporting documents to the report, such as bank statements, fundraising reports. Last Sunday, my daughter's teacher, Mrs Ashley, got the children to write their greatest treasures in life. Rebekah took a photo of our family (and the dog, of course). It was precious and reminded me that my children are also a treasure for my husband and I, given by the Lord's hand. I have a friend who often says, My children are gifts of God. She struggles just like all mothers, but lives every morning in her life. My children are gifts given to me by God, and they are His. I hold them with my palms open. I constantly entrust them to his care because I know there are only so many things I can do with my own strength. Treasure is something precious and precious in our lives. We know that every treasure we can find is rare, and that's why we keep it with our whole being. We'll reward him. I'll arrange it. We're protecting him. We don't take it for granted and live as if treasure doesn't matter to us. We always accept that. Many people go to great lengths and sacrifices for treasures. Perhaps that's why in motherhood we often do the same, even when we are beaten and exhausted at the end of the day. Because we love our children and we want what's best for them. When you ask, Why? What are you doing, Lord? Why did you choose me? What's all this about? Will my hard work pay off? Remember, you're dealing with treasures that are of great value to God, and your work is not in vain. Children are a gift from the Lord; they are a reward from Him. - Psalm 127:3 Read more from Samantha in her book, Quiet Time: A 30-Day Spiritual Retreat for Mothers in the Trenches This post comes from the TODAY parenting group, where all members are welcome to publish and discuss parental decisions.
