The Arkansas Democrat-Gazette has discontinued the Right2Know Image Gallery and taken down all previously released images. For the past decade, the gallery has had photos, names and indictments of people arrested in Pulask, Garland and Suolaian counties. The decision was taken in the interests of fairness and in accordance with our commitment to comply with the highest journalistic standards. The publication of the gallery provided a limited and possibly out-of-context view of the events surrounding the arrests. We have taken into account that people admitted to the newspaper are considered innocent and their entry does not indicate that they have been convicted of arrest charges. In addition, the gallery brings no added value to our news product, as most of Right2Know's arrests are for nonviolent misconduct, which is not normally included in regular news coverage of the magazine. The Democratic Gazette continues to tell newsworthy arrests – stories that are important to the public interest and security. If necessary, we include images and photographs in relevant newsworthy stories, such as when police are looking for a suspect who may be dangerous, or when a person is charged with a crime. When a person with a public presence is arrested, his photograph is published. Our Right2Know site continues to showcase murder maps for Little Rock and North Little Rock, Crime Maps for Little Rock, and databases of government employee payroll databases at the city, county and state level.
