If their people are different, then the massive ratio in length is different. Wave speed is counted by mu using the square root of the tension divided by, the ratio of mass to length. So, it will change. In addition, any other characteristics depending on the speed of the wave, will be affected like the wavelength. A wave frequency is largely of the sterling and free from wire speed, it is only related to the wave period. For part B: If the length is different but the material is the same, then the ratio between the mass and the length will be the same. So, in that case, the speed will be the same.
