Today I want to share some free cellular respiration worksheets with you. This is a laptop site I've done for my kids as we've been reviewing material for glycolysis, krebs cycle and electron transport chain. If this material is too advanced for your kids, be sure to check out the 75+ cell unit packet page available to us. More information below! What is cellular respiration?! Cellular respiration is a chemical process that occurs in all living cells from animal to plant to bacterial cells; Trapped energy in the bindings of food molecules is converted into accumulated energy in ATP molecules. Cellular respiration requires oxygen, a food molecule such as glucose and emits carbon dioxide, water, and energy. Life couldn't exist without cellular respiration. Cellular respiration begins with glycolysis... when one glucose molecule is split in half producing two pyruvic acid molecules. At the end of glycolysis about 90% of the chemical energy that was available in glucose is still unused. The cell turns to oxygen for the final steps of cellular respiration (so, it is known as aerobic respiration). During the Krebs cycle, pyruvic acid is broken down into carbon dioxide. NADH and FADH2 energy carriers are also produced. The electron transport chain uses high-energy electrons from the Krebs cycle to convert ADP into ATP.
