

☐

I'm not robot

reCAPTCHA

Continue

Direct and indirect objects quizlet

14 Questions | Total attempts: 388 Pre-sentence clause expression What questions does a direct object answer? Direct and indirect objects are what parts of speech? True or False: A sentence can have an intermediate object without a direct object. Identify the direct object in the following sentence. If it's not there, select None. Henry won the Scrabble championship game last weekend! Identify the direct object in the following sentence. If it's not there, select None. Caleb's iPhone died yesterday. Identify the direct object in the following sentence. If it's not there, select None. For my childcare services, Ms. Volcheck paid twenty dollars. True or false: The direct object of a sentence is never the subject of the same sentence. Identify the intermediate object in the following sentence. Abeer lent Katherine one dollar for Diet Coke in the teachers' lounge. What determines whether an object is direct or indirect? How is it used in sentences What is a noun performing an action in a sentence? What is the action in the word Mikel rode a bike? Which of these sentences shows an intermediate object? Naomi threw Mike baseball Which one is an abstract noun? Which one doesn't suit others? An object is a noun, pronoun, or noun phrase that gives meaning to a subject and verb in a sentence. In English, there are two types of objects; these are direct and indirect objects. The main difference between a direct object and an intermediate object is that the direct object is the recipient of the action, while the intermediate object is the recipient of the direct object. In this article, we will look at the difference between a direct and an intermediate object. Direct object A is a noun, pronoun, or noun phrase that receives an order or shows the result of an action. He answers the question What? or Who? after the action verb. If you can find a subject and verb in a sentence, then you can find a direct object easily using the formula, Subject + verb + what or who = Direct object For example, let's take a sentence, John and Paul played cricket. In this sentence John and Paul is the subject, play is a verb and cricket is the subject. If you formulating the question What did John and Paul play?, you get the item as the answer. He fixed my car. They played volleyball, I told a lie. I hate it. She eats an apple. A sentence must always have a direct object first, for an intermediate object to exist. In other words, an intermediate object cannot exist in a sentence without a direct object. An intermediate object is a noun or pronoun that is affected by an action. It would be correct to state that the intermediate object is the recipient of a direct object. Example: He sent me a gift. In this sentence, the current direct object, and I am an intermediate object. You may also notice that I am the recipient of a direct object. So we can ask the question for whom he sent the gift? An intermediate item always answers questions about to whom, for whom or for what, etc. She gave it to me. I told my teacher a lie. He bought a gift for his mother. She gave me her English notes. As shown in the examples above, intermediate objects can appear before or after a direct object. But they are always the recipient of a direct object. Let's look at the second example above for example (I told my teacher a lie). Here the teacher is an intermediate object. He answers the question to whom did you tell the lie?. I gave him a gift. Difference between a direct object and an intermediate object Definition of a direct object: A direct object is a noun or pronoun that receives an action. Intermediate object: An intermediate object is a noun or pronoun that is affected by the action and is also the recipient of a direct object. Conditions Direct object: Its presence does not depend on the intermediate object. Intermediate object: A direct object is necessary for the presence of an intermediate Type Direct Objects: They are typically represented by transitive verbs. Intermediate objects: They are typically represented by non-intercoming verbs. Position Direct Objects: These are preceded by an order. Intermediate objects: They are often preceded by prepositions. 20 Questions | Total attempts: 15133 Expression clause Expression Sentence Preposition What questions does a direct object answer? Direct and indirect objects are what parts of speech? What type of verb can a direct object take? True or False: A sentence can have an intermediate object without a direct object. What questions does an intermediate object answer? I didn't pay attention to classes that day. Identify the direct object in the following sentence. If it's not there, select None. I won the Scrabble championship game last weekend! Identify the direct object in the following sentence. If it's not there, select None. My iPhone died yesterday. Identify the direct object in the following sentence. If it's not there, select None. For my childcare services, Mrs. Badboy paid twenty dollars. True or false: The direct object of a sentence is never the subject of the same sentence. True or False: A preposition object is not a direct object in a sentence. Identify the intermediate object in the following sentence. If it's not there, select None. Paul gave Teresa a new hat for her birthday. Identify the intermediate object in the following sentence. If it's not there, select None. Three Bears ate carrot soup with Bugs Bunny. Identify the intermediate object in the following sentence. Sherry lent Arlene one dollar for Diet Coke in the teachers' lounge. Intermediate object in w Sentence. If it's not there, select None. A nail technician painted my nails with red varnish by Opi, my favorite brand. True or False: An intermediate object is always following a direct object in a sentence. Identify direct and indirect objects in the following sentence. Danny made Lesa a delicious omelette for breakfast. Identify direct and indirect objects in the following sentence. A shy boy bought a little red-haired candygram girl for Valentine's Day. Identify direct and indirect objects in the following sentence. Gerald played Thelma her favorite song on tenor saxophone for her wedding anniversary. Anniversary.