What you'll need: Put your cutting board on your workday. Using your knife and steel square, cut 5 pieces of leather into 1 for 2 1/2. Take one of these pieces and fold in half, and this will give us the center of the belt. Using your Economy Punch, punch a hole in this line centered in width wisely. On the same leather piece, drill an additional hole 1/2 from each end. This should give us three holes. Set up the tool panel on a workday to use it for the remaining steps. Take two brass plated loops and, with the welding line inside, push your leather piece from each end and hold out of the center hole. Fold two outer edges around brass plated loops and place 1/4 Double Cap Rivet Post from the back on one final hole. Push the Rivet Post through the hole at the other end and then through the center hole, keeping brass plated loops on either side of the center rivet. Set this rivet with your Rivet Setter and Maul, and it will give us our first segment of leather bracelet. Repeat with as many skin pieces as it takes to create skin enough segments are finished, take 2 additional pieces 1 x 2 1/2. It'll be our snaps cards. Drill one end hole and a central hole just like parts of the segment. Punch the hole at the other end at 3/4 of the end (You can use your Awl for the 3/4 mark before hitting it); Then, punch the round strap end of the punch at this end just for both pieces. Take these pieces and hook these on just like loop segments, but we'll only have one Brass Plated Loop for rivets on. Leave the hole at the end with the end Punch round strap open. Using Anvil from your Setter Rivet set, place Snap in open holes, and your leather cuff is complete! James Dean, Steve McQueen and Marlon Brando knew the power of a damn good leather jacket. An essential top layer instantly transforms your basic everyday clothes into a ruggedly stylish look. But we're not talking about any leather jacket. A high-quality, well-fitting leather jacket will become a signature style piece to wear for decades and even pass on to your children one day. The effortlessly cool look of a leather jacket is timeless, and more importantly, it looks great on men of any age. Of course, it will cost you quite a penny, but when you keep fit, style and quality in mind as you find your perfect blend, you will find the best leather jackets that are worth investing in. FitAko you will spend your hard-earned dollars on one of the best leather jackets, it is important to ensure that the jacket fits perfectly on the shoulders and hugs the inner pit by the hands. An oversized leather jacket might feel a little more comfortable for guys who like a relaxed fit, but it will only make the jacket look cheaper and tacky. You should be able to wear a thin knitted sweater under a leather jacket, and the torso of the jacket should closely defend your body with a heme that hits right at your waist or belt. While it may feel shorter than other jackets in your wardrobe, this is a correct fit for a traditional leather bomber or motorcycle jacket. Quality When it comes to a leather jacket, you get what you pay for – a cheap alternative will really look cheap. Traditional cowhide leather, which is more durable and thicker than other skins, is usually found on old-school motorcycle jackets. If you want softer and lighter skin, lambskin is a great option. You can't go wrong as long as it's high-quality leather. Trusted brands Schott NYC, Belstaff and AllSaints (for a more affordable option) are reliable for their quality leather on any of their leather jackets. If it sells close to $100, it's most likely artificial leather. StyleWhether you go for a racer, motorcycle jacket, trucker, or bomber jacket, opt for the style that best suits. Motorcycle jackets are timeless for a robust style, while a minimalist racing jacket or trucker is more of an office option for sport your 9-to-5. Suede also changes the look of a motorcycle jacket to one that is a little more sophisticated with a rich texture. This investment is less about what is trendy and more about your personal style. With all this in mind, check out the 18 best leather jackets men can buy now and wear forever. A leather bomber jacket is worth investing in for a cool, classic style, but high-quality leather is never affordable – well, until recently. Italic makes men's wardrobe basic in the same factories as designer brands, but for a fraction of the price. So finally, guys can wear well-made garments — like this rich-textured bomber — without spending a fortune. Check Out More Bomber Jackets Here Soft, supple leather on this motorcycle jacket gives it a relaxed, modern vibe, while slim-fit keeps your lean body trimming. This iconic style that Brando popularly made in the classic movie The Wild One is still as lustful today as it was back in the '50s. This durable, heavier motorcycle jacket has the enduring style to be a wardrobe staple for many, many years to come. For menswear, sometimes classics are best like, well, classics. That's why it's rarely a good idea when brands try to reinvent something men already love, like a classic leather motorcycle jacket. However, if you're going to give a timeless jacket a modern update, subtle but effective design tweaks and an unexpected colorway can really highlight it on the clothes rack or in the crowd - that's what Club Monaco did so wonderfully here. A leather pocket, warm chocolate brown leather and silver hardware accents simply elevate the jacket to make men look equally badass and polished. It's the same jacket you love from Levi's, but in a cool leather fabric that's perfect for day-to-night sports. Imagine this smooth, minimalist racer leather jacket over shirts with workwear buttons and trousers for a sleek, everyday look. Sheepskin skin is buttery soft, which only makes it look and feel even more expensive than other options on the market. We've been a fan of this Wilson leather jacket since we observed its similarities to Idris Elba's Givenchy stun gun a few months ago. It is well made, simply fashionable, and age appropriate for any man for sport. It can be hard for any guy to dedicate himself to buying a leather jacket after seeing that it's a big price – and we get it. But that's where Jacket Maker comes in. Tired of ingressing to have to choose between two extremes in prices and quality - a luxe designer or mass market fashion - Syed Obaid set out to create a direct-to-consumer company that cuts out the middle man to produce customizable, high-quality leather clothes that guys can afford without breaking the bank. Leather jackets should be a special piece of men's wardrobe that they will cherly nurture for years while worn on his body, so instead Emphasizing the high cost of quality leather or settling for a cheap option that will fall apart by the end of the season, treat yourself to something special made just for you, just the way you like it. The rich texture of the anthionoša gives the shirt style a luxurious, sophisticated feel with comfort. The leather blazer adds some sharp style to any T-shirt and jeans look with little effort required. This brass-colored option is both extremely elegant and completely unexpected. If you want to stand out in a sea of black, this leather jacket is pure gold. Some guys make the mistake of buying a large leather jacket to layer over their go-to hoodie - it's wrong. The right choice can be found with a removable hoodie insert that holds a custom-made jacket. The brand's rich history with motorcycle racing dating back to the early 20th century ensures you get a high-quality racing jacket worth a high price. They may be known for their waxy cotton jackets, but their luxurious leather offerings are equally noteworthy. Retro racer stripes add a robust style to your everyday look, no matter what it wears underneath. It's just a no-brainer. For more guys in need of a leather jacket with versatility, look no further than this stylish Acne Studios stun machine than richly textured cowhog skin. Top Gun: Maverick won't hit theaters until next year, but with the trend shear collar going strong in recent years, you can bet this style will only become even more popular in the seasons to come. The warmth and comfort of puffers combined with the rich appearance of the skin makes this jacket a valuable investment for any men's wardrobe.
