Google slides insert equation

Google Docs has a formula editor that allows users to insert mathematical symbols into documents. Unfortunately, there is no equation editor for Google presentations. The workaround is the Daum Equation Editor, a Chrome app that launches in a Chrome web browser. The Daum Equation Editor works like most formula editors, various templates such as minutes, radicals, symbols, etc. After you create the formula, you have the Save as Image option in the lower right corner. On my Mac, the save as image option does not add the file extension required to .jpg the image file to work. Just type a name at .jpg end of the file name. Save the image to your desktop and drag it directly from your desktop to Google Presentation. This is a relatively easy way to get a math representation to my Google presentation. The downside is that the expression is an image, not interactive. If you need to make changes, you need to go back to the formula editor and create a new editor. However, this is a relatively easy and free way for students to get math symbols in Google presentations. Google app main menu document editor to close search clear search search The Docs Editor in Google Docs provides basic support for adding formulas. I couldn't find anything like that in the Google Slides editor. Does anyone know of a workaround? Sabrina Corsetti overall is really lovely. However, this add-on is just a heads-up that can't be used to add equations to Google Slides in brave browser. Outputs an error about the overloaded constructor. I didn't remove the stars for this because the developers probably didn't know, and many mods don't work properly with Brave. Again, just a heads-up.
