Presentation of Marilyn Groop's The Great Debaters Cinema Study Guide, for learning literature using medium films! Cinema studies for learning literature are aimed at the visual learner in high school, on those who are non-successor readers or for whom reading is very time consuming, and those who adore movies! Good films tell good stories, and good storytelling requires the use of traditionally respected literary devices and techniques. With a little help from a study guide, many films present the viewer with excellent literature, which presents itself in visual media. This format for studying literature is a great option for high school students who become overwhelmed by a demanding reading list. Can you really use movies as literature? While reading books is still a necessary part of a teenage secondary education, the placement of ANALYSIS of literature especially in the arena of films is a good option for some students. As with all the curriculum from 7Sisters, we strive for jobless work and non-overkill, rather than offering teenagers the opportunity to build critical thinking skills while earning high school credits. Here's how Marilyn Groop's Cinema Studies for Literature Learning guides work. Each study guide asks the student to read the introductory material, watch the film once, and then takes a week to reflect on the ideas and literary devices they have noticed. Ideally, students should discuss their answers with someone else in order to improve the learning process. Students then watch the film a second time, answer questions an, and then write in response to the proposed task at the end of the study guide. The writing tasks foresee a certain degree of basic understanding of the student regarding the structure of the paragraph and the essay form. (If your teenage daughter didn't practice writing an essay, we recommend you look into a writing manual, such as the Introductory Guide to the High School Essay Writing by Marilyn Groop, which is available in the ebookstore here.) This product downloads as two separate PDF files. One file is for student use. This document contains full fields so that students can enter their responses directly into the guide. The second document is the answer key for parents. It's a form of battle that fights with words. The perfect quote from the film is: Now is always the right time to do the right thing. One of the most important lessons in The Great Debate is found in one of his memorable lines: We do what we need to do to do what we want. Pre-study activities: Here I intend to use the Question Formulation Technique. In short, it goes like this: When students know how to ask their questions, deepen their understanding and make new connections and discoveries themselves. Source: Harvard Education Letter. This activity was started by the teacher designing questions focus. Here's more to start the action: How to master the art of discussing how it grew up as an African American in the South in the 1930s. Jim crow laws, Harvard University, lynching, the great depression, a debate team, could blacks participate in anything they wanted to then? Give post-it class notes or use wallwisher and work in groups after 4th a.) Create questions (ask as many questions as possible. Don't stop to discuss, judge or answer questions. Write down each question exactly as indicated. Turn the statement into a question. b.) Improve questions, categorize questions as closed or open. C.) Priority of the question • Choose the three most important issues. Why did you choose these three as the most important? Watch the movie!
