More than 400 slaves were sold. On the first day of the auction, the sky darkened and heavy rain began to fall. The rain lasted for two days, stopping only after the auction had finished. The simultaneous storm from the auction led to these two days being called crying time. Master storyteller Julius Lester took this footnote of history and created the culmination of achieving his literary career. Julius Lester tells the story of several characters, including Emma, a slave owned by Pierce Butler and the caretaker of his two daughters, and Pierce, a man with growing gambling debts and a household to protect. Emma wants to teach her daughters who oppose slavery and who supports it to have nice hearts. Meanwhile, in a desperate attempt at survival, Pierce decides to cash in on his estate and organize the largest slave auction in American history. And on this day the sky opens and weeping endlessly on the following proceedings. Using the many voices of enslaved Africans and their owners, Julius Lester took a little-known, all-true event in American history and transformed it into a painful and powerfully dramatic epic about slavery and the struggle to confirm humanity in its midst. Repeatedly, in a wonderful and outstanding body of work, Julius Lester referred to the great horror at the heart of the African-American experience: the inevitable legacy of slavery. His latest book, Day of Tears: A Novel in Dialogue, focuses on the historic two-day auction in , the largest ever recorded when Georgia plantation owner Pierce Butler earned a lot of chattel to cover his gambling debts: this abomination became known as crying time. The novel is written as a prismatic array of fictional dialogues. We witness this event primarily through the eyes of Emma, aged 12 at the beginning and accused of caring for Butler's two daughters Butler's wife, the famous British actress Fanny Kemble, left him when he refused to emancipate the vast slave population who supported his lavish lifestyle. The Master promised Emmie that he would not be among those sold out. Lester gets inside the souls of 25 characters, ranging from career auctioneer to broken old man too easily rejected as Uncle Tom.Part 1: Part 2: Part 3: Resource Bank Contents. Please lower the flag. This is our message. We only have two goals. The first is the name January 22, Day of Tears, and the second is to encourage people to lower their flags in mourning on that day. On January 22, 1973, seven Supreme Court justices stated that they had discovered the right to abortion in the Constitution. That assertion in Roe v. Wade, is a legal fiction because the Constitution does not safeguard such a right. Some days have names, such as Memorial Day and Labor Day. We try to name a new day. It will be called The Day of Tears and will be a day of national mourning. The second goal is to encourage people across the country to whiff the flag at half-staff on January 22. As Americans wake up on this day and go about their daily activities, they will see the flags abandoned and ask who died? Ordinary Americans like you can't change the Supreme Court. A constitutional amendment cannot be adopted. And you can't force Congress to act. But you can lower your flag. You are one lone American. But millions of other lonely Americans will join you. When a nation sees flags abandoned in mourning, it will pause and remember the precious innocents who died, and there is nothing the Supreme Court or Congress can do to stop it. We believe that if culture can be changed, it will help to end abortion. The Day of Tears team asks you to let everyone you know know that January 22 is Day of Tears. Please lower the flag.
