In the southern half of the Baja California peninsula, discover an often wild desert landscape, across from a bright blue sea full of life. Along the east coast, the Sea of Cortez - known as the Jacques Cousteau World Aguarium - presents underwater adventures from snorkelling with the ocean's largest fish to diving along a regeneration reef, an extraordinary environmental success story. When you wake up to snack, relax at sublime sunsets, taste traditional tacoria flavors, and spot isolated hot springs. The less traveled road awaits. San José del Cabo is located at the southern end of Baja California Sur, next to the Pacific Corporation and the Cortez Sea. The quiet, not-so-crazy sister city of Cabo San Lucas, San José del Cabo is known for its Spanish colonial architecture, massive mission cathedral circa 1730, and gallery-filled art district. The city's cheerful art trip takes place every Thursday evening from November to June, when the weather is almost perfect every day. To the south, find the San José del Cabo Nature Reserve. This peaceful place, where the Rio San Jose meets the ocean, attracts about 200 species of local and migratory birds, including tree storks, pelicans, baked noses, ibis and hawks. Take your camera or binoculars, and hire a kayak to cruise around the beach lagos. Or deploy it along the well-marked hiking trail. (Find out what Baja California is doing to save its fishing communities.) A short drive southwest reveals one of the last luxury resorts to move along the lively oceanfront corridor stretching from San José del Cabo to Cabo San Lucas. At Montage Los Cabos Resort, which flows the Bay of Santa María Bay to reach the spa - 40,000 sm of happiness - for treatments such as the Baja Desert Cocoon that stamps out the health characteristics of sage and agaba. Then treat yourself to new dishes at Mezcal Restaurant before lying in an ocean-view suite. Yes, Kavo San Lucas has a worthy reputation as a city for blaring parties. But it's easy to ditch the hard-pressed drinking games Like paragliding, surfing and whale watching no matter what time of year, don't miss el Arco's impressive rock formation at the tip of the peninsula, called Land's End. Now you've earned this margarita in Cabo and Abu Cantina by the ruckman Sammy Hagar. El Arco's impressive rock formation, near Cabo San Lucas, is at the tip of the peninsula, called Land's End. Photo by TIM FITZHARRIS, MINDEN PICTURES While you're being motored north along the Pacific coast, the setting changes to bocolic turmoil, giving a sense of local life in Baja California Sur. At El Pescadero, the annual chili and tussle festival, held in March, celebrates the crops that grow here. Popular surfing, with great breaks in Los Cerritos and San Pedrito. Bring a board to hang 10 times throughout the day, or take a class at Pescadero Surf Camp (supplied boards), which offers overnight accommodation, from campsites to casitas. Blue-striped snappers swim at a school in Isla Esperito Santo. Photo: ANNE FARRAR, National Geographic Photo A collection further up the west coast lies Todos Santos, defined by the Mexican government as one of the country's Pueblos Mágicos, or magic towns, for its unique culture, history, and beauty. Check into the 11-room Hotel California, not inspired by the Eagles' famous tune, but still a stapled destination. Opened in 1950 by a Chinese immigrant renamed Don Antonio Tabasco, the hotel was the first place in the city with ice, and therefore a cold beer, making it a local hot spot. Explore the galleries and, if you're lucky, dolphin sightings. Cross the peninsula into the resting La Paz, the country's capital and gateway to the Sea of Cortez, with its seemingly endless water-focused adventures. Stay for a few days at the resort and ask the concierge to arrange a snorkel with whale sharks, gentle giants that can reach 10 metres or more. Other options? Scuba diving with hammerhead sharks, Moray Eels, and sea lions in Isla Esperito Santo or surfing a paddling board standing up on secluded beaches such as a blender. Stroll along the famous and renovated Malcon Promenade before entering tacos in El Severuso. Head south to the remote Punta Pescadero Paradise overlooking the sea. Famous for its quiet allure and world-class sport fishing, expect to pack fish, sailfish or dorado - with the help of experienced quides - and then feast on your catch that evening. Windsurfing and kite surfing dominate the water 10 miles along the east coast at Los Biles. Gear up at Vela Baja Adventure Sports, ExotiKite Kite, or Baja School Kite, which gives helpful tips on how to lax over the waves like a pro. In the hills surrounding Santiago, hit the road Search treasures along dirt roads to discover hidden hot springs. The springs to Churro are easier to reach, while Santa Rita is more challenging. Look out for La Zora Canyon Waterfall . Locals can help point the way. The big attraction near the tiny town of Cabo Pulmo is Cabo Pulmo National Marine Park. The 17,570-hectare protected area is part of a UNESCO World Heritage Site and has rejuvenate sea life along a 20,000-year-old coral reef. Get dressed and roast downstairs to meet people, turtles, eels, snappers and sharks. (Where to approach with wildlife in Magdalene Bay.)
