Secret service jobs apply

By Scott Thompson Updated June 29, 2018 Getting a job at the U.S. Secret Service is far from easy because the selection process is extremely competitive. Applicants must have either a college degree or a combination of college and law enforcement experience, with a background in criminal investigations. They must also be in good condition and be able to pass a criminal background check. The Secret Service was established in 1865 to investigate counterfeiting and cases of financial fraud. While the Secret Service is better known for its role in ensuring security for the president and other key figures, its primary mission remains to investigate and prevent fraud and forgery. If you manage to be hired by the Secret Service, you are sometimes tasked with investigating financial crimes. At other times, you are assigned to investigate threats against people with intelligence protection or to provide direct protection services. The Secret Service provides protection services for the US President and Vice President; members of their families; former Presidents and Vice-Presidents; Presidential candidates; and to visit world leaders. The first step to becoming an intelligence agent is to excel at school and not get into trouble with the law. Because so many people want to become Secret Service agents and because of the sensitive nature of the work, any criminal activity on your record disqualifies you as an applicant. To apply for the Secret Service, you must be an American citizen between the ages of 21 and 37, with uncorrected vision no worse than 20/60. If your vision is not 20/20 uncorrected, it must be corrected to 20/20. You must also have a current driver's license. Secret Service agents are hired at one of two salary levels. To qualify for the GL-7 grade, you must have a bachelor's degree with a grade average of at least 3.0 or 3.5 for your junior and senior years. Or you must have been a member of a collegial honorary society or graduated in the top third of your class. Alternatively, you can qualify for the GL-7 grade if you have completed at least 18 semester hours of graduate school or if you have at least one year of professional experience in the type of law enforcement tasks that the Secret Service performs. To qualify for the GL-9 grade, you must have a Master's degree or equivalent pedagogical experience, or you must have at least one year of criminal investigative experience on a that corresponds to that of a GL-7 agent. All Secret Service applicants must pass the Treasury Enforcement Agent exam and other exams. Applicants with an educational background in criminal justice or prerogation are preferred, but this is not an official requirement. All applicants must also pass a physical fitness test, a series of interviews and an examination. If it's In your life story, which would prevent you from obtaining top-level security clearance, you will not be hired as a Secret Service Agent. Secret Service positions are so competitive that you should probably start planning and preparing for your application from the beginning of your college career if you want to be a strong candidate. Author Scott Thompson has been writing professionally since 1990, starting with the Pequawket Valley News. He is the author of nine published books on topics such as history, martial arts, poetry and fantasy fiction. His work also appeared in the journal Talebones and the anthology Strange Pleasures. The Secret Service, the oldest federal agency in the United States, protects key government officials and systems. Protected persons usually include former, current and elected presidents, vice presidents and their families. The Secret Service also protects top presidential candidates and visits from dignitaries from other nations. In addition, the Secret Service prevents and investigates financial crimes against the government. The Secret Service was established in 1865 to combat counterfeiting, during the Civil War, and deals with counterfeiting, money laundering and financial fraud. Other crimes prevented and investigated by the Secret Service include security attacks such as hacking attacks against government information, communications, and banking systems. The Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) does not provide a career prospect page with salary data for the careers of Secret Service agents, but the general page for police and detectives shows a median annual salary of 63,380 US dollars from 2018. BIS expects the average number of police and detectives to increase employment by 5% between 2018 and 2028. Advertising CriminalJusticeDegreeSchools.com is an ad-supported site.
