The band consists of the deceased fictional characters in the form of a zombie who is trying to prevent the whole life of the DC Universe. History of publications Before The nightly event, Black Hand (head and first member of the Black Lantern Corps) was already set up as a villain within the pages of green lanterns. Writer Geoff Johns revised his origins and expanded on some aspects of it during the Green Lantern: The Secret Origin story arc (2008). [1] During the arc, the Hand-energization weapon (previously considered an original invention) has been discovered to be built by Atrocitus, the enemy of the guardians of the universe and the future founder of the Red Lantern Corps. [2] Atrocitus comes to Earth and approaches Hand, recognizing him as a door to black that possesses the power to make for The Blackest Night. The hand manages to escape and pocket the weapon as he escapes. [3] [4] Holding this weapon soon makes him the enemy of the Green Lantern Corps, because now he feels it is necessary to erase the light of the emotional spectrum. [5] Coming to prison, Black Hand is experiencing a sudden increase in power that kills his captors. Xander roams the desert, hearing a voice instructing him to recover the soul of characters who were reanimated. [6] Hand kills your family and commits suicide. Guardian Scar arrives and creates the first black power ring that reanimates Black Hand. She discovers that Rock is the physical embodiment of death, and serves as the embodiment of the Black Lantern Corps in the same way that Ion, Parallax, and Predator have willpower, fear, and love respectively. [5] The arm later digs up Bruce Wayne's corpse, removes his skull, and recu lists the Black Lantern oath for the first time. Soon after, black power rings descend upon the universe and begin to revive the dead like black lanterns that attack both heroes and the villains of the DC Universe. [7] Black Hand is said to be holding Wayne's skull in all subsequent appearances, which include it in the necrophiliac form of the Blackest Night #1 as black power rings emerge from the Black Power Battery, an exingclaim that Wayne's death plays a much bigger role in Blackest Night than anyone thinks. At the end of the issue, it is evident that Black Hand uses the skull to produce new power rings at her own end of her will, creating two rings for the newly deceased Carter Hall and Kendra Saunders. In the Blackest Night #3, Indigo-1 describes the premise behind the Black Lantern Corps's fictional relationship with the universe. She explains that the darkness that existed before the creation of the universe is what powers the Black Lanterns. Banished during the dawn of the creation of white light, its struggles back cause white light to fusion into the emotional spectrum. The events that uncover throughout the black-and-nocturnal night headlines are the result of darkness, again fighting back against creation. She goes on to describe how the combination of all seven lights can white light creation and the end of the Black Lantern. Throughout the Blackest Night event, every time a Black Lantern successfully removes the heart of one of the victims, a black, lantern-shaped speech balloon (used by the Green Lantern and Green Lantern Corps to indicate that the power ring speaks) depicts an ever-increasing power level, increasing the increase by 0.1 percent. [8] In The Blackest Night #4, the power meter is filled and Scar is able to transport the Black Central Power Battery to Coast City, and the true mastermind behind the Black Lanterns is able to step into the main DC Universe: Nekron. After being introduced into the primary role of the Blackest Night event, Indigo-1 recruits Hal Jordan to gather a team capable of restoring white light creation (opting for having a personal connection with the strongest members of the five remaining corps). [9] The story, which takes place in Green Lantern, depicts Jordan and Indigo-1 recruiting Carol Ferris, Sinestro, Saint Walker, Atrocitus and Larfleeze for their purpose. [10] Blackest Night #5, the team is attacking the Black Central Power Battery with the opposite result expected. Nekron is fortified and able to recruit life characters reanimated from the death of his Black Lantern Corps. Although seven corps representatives attempt to call for help, Recruiting temporary deputies until the rest of their enclosures arrive – Gantt joins the Green Lantern Corps, Scarecrow joins the Sinestro Corps, Barry Allen joins the Blue Lanterns, Atom joins the Indigo tribe, Mera joins the Red Lantern, Lex Luthor is inducted into orange lanterns, and Wonder Woman is saved from her Black Lantern identity to join Star Sapphires – they are almost discouraged when Nekron digs up the unit, first lives in the universe, and tries to kill it. After Sinestro's attempts and failing to merge with a unit similar to Hal's bond with Parallax – Sinestro powered the company with his ego rather than his will to survive – Hal takes control of the unit himself, indicating that the heroes still chose to return to life, even if Nekron gave them a chance. With this behind him, Hal reunites with the unit and releases the reanimated heroes of Nekron's hold, creating the White Lantern Corps in the process, and then reanimates Black Hand and Anti-Monitor to deprive Nekron of his touch up with the world of life and his energy sources respectively. White lanterns used the power of White Light to finally vanquish Nekron and the threat of Blackest Night passed with Black Lanterns in a shortcut along with their power rings. [11] The revival of the Black Lantern Corps, though seemingly destroyed, the black lantern aspect returned to the firestorm when his dark undead person appeared — claiming to be the name of Deathstormu. [12] Torturing two hosts of The Firestorm Matrix, later went to the White Lantern Power Battery, where he spoiled it. Although he originally planned to destroy it to kill his whole life in the universe, he came and ordered him not to start doing so. Instead, it ordered Deathstorm to make it an army so that it could command power over life itself. With these words said, the White Lantern Power Battery along with Deathstorm created an undead Black Lantern from 12 reanimated heroes and villains who were reborn at the end of Blackest Night. [13] After the deathstorm steals the White Lantern, he, along with Firestorm, is being transported to Qward in the Anti-Matter Universe by the Anti-Monitor, discovered that behind the return of the 12 Black Lanterns. However, they are all destroyed when Ronnie and Jason teamed up, thus allowing Ronnie's work to be done and he has to return to live the White Entity. [14] New 52 After a Black Hand suicide to avoid being inducted into the Indigo Tribe once again, the Black Power Ring emerges from his corpse, reviving him as a Black Lantern again, though it did not resume Blackest Night, probably because Nekron was imprisoned in the Dead Zone at that time. Black Hand returns to Earth and reanimates his family and various dead in the cemetery around his house, but Hal Jordan and Sinestro were able to defeat these zombies by detonating Sinestro's old yellow energy battery. They don't know that the book Black has announced that Hal Jordan will be the greatest Black Lantern in the following. [15] When trapped in the Dead Zone (the realm between life and death) and deprived of his ring, Hal contemplates suicide because it was the only way to use the power of the remaining Black Lantern ring and using it to escape the Dead Zone and stop the First Lantern. [16] Seeing the people of Korugar enter the Death Zone, Hal finally makes the ultimate sacrifice and jumps off the cliff. [17] Hal demanded a black hand power ring and rises like a Black Lantern, which in turn reduced the body of the Black Arm to dust. With the help of the Indigo tribe, Hal escapes from the Dead Zone and uses an army of Black Lanterns against Volthoom, but the undead legion is easily destroyed. Hal then goes to call Necrone, who finally kills Volthoom. Hal then sends Nekron back to his grave in the Dead Zone as his green ring returns to him, restoring him to life and membership in the Green Lantern Corps. [18] During the war between the Young Gods and various Lantern Corps, The Black Hand reanimated various Source Titans (including Relics) that were thwarted during the Source Wall as Black Lanterns. However, after Highfather's malicious life equation, they are fully resurrected. [19] Dark Night Pages: Death Metal, Batman was revealed to have been killed in the fight against Perpetua and the Dark Knights of the Dark Multi-Show could explain why Black Lantern Ring. He later used Black Lantern rings to revive Air Wave, Animal Man, Anthro, Atom, Bat Lash, Black Condor, Blue Beetle, Claw Unconquered, Dan Dyna-Mite, Dove I, Enemy Ace, Fate, Hawk II, Hourman, Human Bomb, Johnny Quick, Liberty Belle, Red Bee, both Red Tornadoes, Sandman, and TNT. [20] The most notable members of San Diego Comic Con 2009, Geoff Johns was able to discuss his reasoning behind choosing Black Hand as the leader of the new corps, the character qualities of Black Lanterns, and his own goals in writing their depictions. Commenting on the characters being chosen to revive during Blackest Night, Johns said: Black rings are not about who is dead; black rings are about what is alive. So, scenes like Elongated Man and Sue Dibny take on Hawkman and Hawkgirl in the kind of beginning of that emotional conflict and terror that you'll see throughout Blackest Night. So the black rings are again looking for the dead, which is important to our heroes. [21] At the time of the creation of Blackest Night, Jones (not interested in or scared of zombies) wanted to bring the dead characters so that they were horrific and emotionally disturbing to the living characters they encountered. To accomplish this effect, Black Lanterns are personalities and actively search for those who will most affect their appearance. [22] A great example of Johns using personality disorder with Black Lanterns is an elongated man (usually depicted as a light character who uses his detective skills to smell if something is not right), looking at his victims and pointing to his undead wife: I smell the secret. [8] [22] Johns identifies the power of Black Lanterns, which is not always evil, but is not good either. [23] In the initial creation of the new corps, Jones drew from the information he had collected while taking physics lessons. With the corps's emotional spectrum of personifying life, he knew that this corps would need to represent death. Black's lack of light, he chose Black Hand as the leader of the corps of both character titles as well because of how much he enjoyed improving villains writing on Flash. Like other members of the Black Lantern Corps, Johns wanted to take a different approach to his emaving Black Hand. Since other villains may have a special motivation, Hands is supposed to be portrayed as a character that is clearly insane and whose presence makes others uncomfortable. 24 Blackest Night #2, several black power rings trying to revive the body of Dove (Don Hall), only to be prevented from disturbing his grave with an invisible barrier. As they collide with the barrier, the ring typical command (Rise) is interrupted, Rings Instead Answer: Don earth hall in peace. This is the first the rings of black power fail to recruit a member of the Black Lantern Corps. [25] In an interview with IGN Jones, he explains Ace's immunity to black force rings: You'll learn about it as we move forward. But really it speaks to don hall nature. He can't be desecrated by things like that. He is an inviolable man of death and total peace than any other being in the universe. Reflecting on the ring constraints, Johns continues to point out that even if magic is a joke on black power rings (although undead Giovanni John Zatara is capable of wielding black magic), Don is quite the opposite. [26] Similarly, Blackest Night: Titans #1 Black Lantern Snee's Hall fails to read Dawn Granger's emotions; her aura depicted as white rather than the color of the emotional spectrum. In the Blackest Night: Batman #1, the spirit of Deadman fails to prevent the black power ring from reviving his remains. Deadman is trying to get his corpse but is unable to control it. [27] During the Blackest Night panel at San Diego Comic Con 2009, Geoff Johns was asked whether the revived corpses of Black Lanterns spoke for themselves, or if they were controlled by external force. Johns refused to answer, which means that the question will be answered during the Blackest Night storyline. [28] Similarly, although it is overcome by a black power ring, Spectre declares that he will not be used. [25] Before Specter turned to The Black Rock marks the aura of life around the members of the Shadow Pack Zatanna and the Blue Devil. Scanning the phantom stranger, Black Hand notes that the stranger is neither living nor dead, and notes him as a person of interest to his corps. [25] Black Lanterns Current Members Black Hand – Hereinafter black incarnation, incarnation of black lanterns. [5] Batman – Killed in the Invasion of the Dark Knights of the Dark Multiverse, Bruce Wayne was resurrected by the Black Lantern Ring and secretly held on to the last White Lantern energy that has been crushed into a bullet that can potentially be powerful enough to prevent him from turning into a more destructive and homicidal form of a Black Lantern. Using White Lantern Power for Life, Hal Jordan commands William Hand Earth – Live, resurrecting the Black Hand and removing him as the Black Lantern Corps's main energy source – in dealing a crippling and ultimately fatal blow to Black Lanterns. [11] The book Black Hidden within the Vaults of Oa is a massive black tome known as the Ultimate Promoter of the Blackest Night. Written in spoiled blood by the treacherous Guardian of the Universe, The Scar, a book containing prophecies. Prophecies indicate which Earth's heroes have the ability to endure Blackest Night and ensure the survival or destruction of the universe. Also on its pages are all the guardians of the forbidden history of the universe, and in an effort to protect its secrets, the rogue Guardian was forced to imprison Sinestro corps tallekeeper Lyssa Drak inside the book. After Scars' true death and the end of Blackest Night, the book Black is found in Ganthet, who notes that it retains much forbidden knowledge on its pages. He decides to keep it a secret from other guardians and entrusts Guy Gardner with the secret. [35] The book is later adopted by Kroon, who, after the release of Lyssa Drak from inside the book[36], takes it to Ryut Dead Planet. There, after the discovery of The New Guardians, it opens its pages to reveal the history of Crohn's. [37] Soon they attacked the book holder, former Sinestro Corps member Lyssa Drak. She is capable of trapping Sinestro himself, Carol Ferris, Indigo-1, Atrocitus, Saint Walker and Larleeze inside the book. However, Sinestro is able to prevent her capturing Hal Jordan as well, causing detonation using the combined energy of their rings. The energy explosion also affects the book Black, which disappears into the rainbow light, leaving only the rings of the six trapped lanterns. The book is later seen by Oa while it forces captured lanterns to relive their lives before getting their current rings. After the defeat of the crown and the release of the New Guardians, the book is adopted by Lyssa Drak. She later faced the now Green Lantern Sinestro which tracked her with the help of an energy-manipulating alien hero he fought while in the Sinestro Corps. Contact with the black book reveals the Guardians plan to replace the Corps with the Third Army. [38] The book then returns to the property of Black Hand, as the guardians of the universe seek. The book reveals in Black Hand that Hal Jordan is not his enemy. When questioned about the fact that it reveals that Jordan will be the greatest Black Lantern. After the black arm trapped in the Shadow Chamber,[39] The Black Papers are obtained by Green Lantern B'dg, [40] the book sucks B'dg and Simon Baz into it and returns to Black Hand. [41] The book's prophecy has been revealed to be true when Hal Jordan transforms a black Lantern as a means to escape the Dead Zone. Hal then calls Necrone to win the first lantern Volthoom. After his defeat, Hal is released from the black lantern and returns to life as a Green Lantern again. [18] Powers and Abilities Main Article: Power ring William Hand black power ring Black Lanterns are corpses reanimated with black power rings that have been fueled by the power of death. Corpses reanimated with black power rings are reconstructed when damaged, keeping the body in working order at all times. [42] Black power rings are capable of regenerating normally fatal injuries to their users (including complete dissolution). [27] [43] Rings create black tendrils to root themselves in corpses, making it impossible to remove them by physical force. [9] The first black power ring has no charge, but every time a Black Lantern kills someone and removes their heart, the .01 percent power of each ring in the corps is restored. [8] [44] Blackest Night #3, Indigo-1 hardens the subject, explaining that those who rise feed on emolions. Even at low power, black rings allow their user to fly and create black energy structures. They are also not influenced by magic. [26] In the classic zombie way, the Black Lantern bite causes slow-acting necrosis, which eventually turns the victim into a fellow Black Lantern. It is unknown whether this power can work for any living being, or just those characters that have been reanimated from death before (such as Superman, Green Arrow, and Donna Troy). [45] Superman with a wide range of emotions (will, fear, anger, hope and love). [46] Nekron uses Anti-Monitor as a physical power source for Black Power Battery. It has alluded to the backstories of several comics and Omens that it is anti-Monitor's desire to end humanity that made him a prime candidate to become a power battery after his betrayal and subsequent murder at the hands of Superboy-Prime during the Sinestro Corps war. In a climactic battle with all the collective Lantern Corps, the Anti-Monitor has almost released the Power Battery and discovered it only succumbed in part to Nekron's influence (manifested by the visual Black Hand symbol displayed on every Black Lantern only being half finished), demanding that he be released so he can exact revenge on Nekron for his imprisonment. [47] [48] As part of the final coup de grace against the Black Lantern Corps, the unit also commands the Anti-Monitor of Qward – Live, which released him from the Black Power Battery – destroying it in the process. It was an Anti-Monitor physical corpse, along with the Black Hand presence as a Unit of Death, served as a full source of Black Lantern hull capacity. Black Lanterns are able to read emotions as colored auras that correlate with the emotional spectrum. [8] Several emotions are read as a multicolored aura, but ileyas emotions come out as white. [49] In addition, demonic and underground dwellers (such as Etrigans Demon) are read with a black aura, apparently as unreadable as white because of their dead nature. The state of deep suspended animation is enough to fool Black Lantern, making the target suspended animation invisible to the black lantern senses. [50] Oding-free hearts like Scarecrow's make their mediums equally invisible to Black Lanterns. [29] When faced with beings with warped spiritual states, or otherwise addled minds (such as Bizarro), the correlation between emotions openly and the actual color that Black Lanterns see is inverted. [51] In addition to the abilities assigned to them by rings, Black Lanterns retain all the skills and superpowers they may have had in life. [8] Vulnerability in Black Lanterns are vulnerable to white light and green light combination with other body lights. When a black power ring is destroyed, the corpse anims it becomes inert. [9] Kimiyo Hoshi and Halo can completely destroy Black Lanterns using their light-based powers. [52] [53] Conner Kent used the Honey Mask to destroy two black lanterns, forcing them to experience the full power of the emotional spectrum, irritating enough to iron their black power rings to take themselves out of their carriers and flee. [54] Black lanterns are also vulnerable to Wonder Woman's Lasso truths. [55] The touch of a black lantern, commonly used to remove victims' hearts and drain them from emotional energy, can also separate the connection between other black lanterns and their black power ring. [56] Barry Allen was able to deactivate the black rings that were targeting him and Hal Jordan through time travel, jumping two seconds into the future so the rings could be turned off if they couldn't feel it assigned to the wearers. [57] One common way to stop a Black Lantern is to injure them faster than a ring capable of restoring their body (such as the plasma that Red Lantern voices out, a mutated pitcher plant with strong digestive fluid, or intense heat in the mogo core). [58] [59] Others who have proven resistant to Black Lantern rings are either those who have been in the hands of power rings before or usually otherworldly beings such as Etrigan Demon, who have no human heart and human emotions, Atrocilus, whose heart was replaced by his ring, Shade, which is truly immortal and thus cannot die, and, Osiris, whose magical character allowed him some similarity to control the ring. Don Hall (the original Dove) was immune to the recruitment of the Black Lantern Corps as he was at peace in the The black lantern rings that tried to recruit him. Another vulnerability in their rings of power is that the odd physics behind magical power can be dumfounded in their abilities, as was the case when Arthur's daughter Serenity cast defensive spells that interfered with the blackout effect of his power ring. [60] In other versions of The Flashpoint Square, the successful murder of William Hand at the hands of a Red Lantern called Atrocitus freed Nekron from prison long before several different colored lantern corps and the long prophesied War of Lights ever erupted across the Universe. Shortly after being released, Nekron used his dark powers to build a Black Lantern Corps using the corpse of a Green Lantern and countless other lifeforms that have fallen before him. Like the original DCU, Nekron directs his Black Lanterns on a quest to eradicate all life in the universe. As of now, more than 200 of the industries under the jurisdiction of the guardians of the universe, with the exception of those already rend asunder by the roving army of soulless, renegade manhunter drones, have been systematically wiped out by Nekron and his forces. Of the 2,793 remaining industries left, at least half of them have come under attack from the Black Lantern Corps. New 52: Futures End Possible Futures End set five years later: Crohn's is reanimated as a Black Lantern and runs his Black Lanterns against Hal Jordan and Relic. [61] Sinestro smashes Lyssa Drak's skull to the ground, which evokes the Black Lantern Power Ring, and Sinestro uses it to reanimate his body as Black Lantern. [62] In other media, Green Lantern: Animated series, Aya body parts that are changed to black after Aya takes over the Anti-Monitor body. Her agenda, while initially eliminating all emotions from the universe, eventually changes to destroy organic life (manipulating the Big Bang) and filling the universe with a self-reed clotting machine instead. It's probably a cottage on the Black Lantern Corps, although at no time does her emblem change from regular Green Lantern shape. Also, when heroes investigate Scar's cameras for clues, the Black Book with the hull symbol is visible on the shelf. In Injustice 2, the Black Lantern Corps represents Hal Jordan's two Death Palette swap. The Black Lantern emblem also appears on some fitting body armor gear in the Green Lantern.
