How to host a National Lampoon Christmas holiday movie viewing party, complete with christmas themed holiday menus and decorations! Read below on how to host your own Christmas holiday movie party with Christmas holiday food and décor. Tell your guests to dress up in their best cheap Griswold-inspired costumes! Every Christmas we watch the National Lampoon Christmas holiday movie with friends who appreciate laughter as much as we do. One year we decided to host a Christmas holiday movie viewing party with others who love the movie and asked them to dress up in cheap Griswold-inspired outfits. The party has been a hit and you can host your own Christmas holiday party, too! We didn't host a Christmas holiday party last year, but I made sense to share the idea on a blog. This year we're throwing a griswold-inspired party again in a couple of weeks, so it's fresh on my mind. I want to share with you the Christmas holiday national Lampoon's food and decoration ideas! First, you need to ask your guests to dress up in their best Griswold-inspired outfits. With a quick Google search, you'll find lots of ideas! Encourage them to be creative and don't spend a lot of money. But if buying a costume is your only option, you will find some good ones here. Ben dressed as Clark Griswold in pajamas with a hair towel. The hair towel we used is no longer available but this one is very close. The pyjamas were the closest we could find for a decent price in the Old Navy shops. You can find clark griswold's official pajamas here. It helps to invite friends who are also fans of the film, or will not be so grateful for the Christmas holiday themed dishes and decorations. These friends will also be more willing to plan fun cheap clothes! We use Evite for email invitations, so there's no need to bother getting mailing addresses and buying stamps. It's a completely free service. Evite does not have a Christmas themed option, so I choose the best one that fits a cheap theme. Below are ideas for Christmas holiday themed party decorations. (This year, I'll hopefully add more ideas!) This cat models fried cats from the Christmas holiday who fried across the floor after playing with the Christmas tree lights. This fried cat was made of black building paper and I had tinsel at hand. It didn't take through storage, so I'll be making a new one this year probably using black felt and cotton on fuzz. This idea (and others) was taken from another blogger who happens to live in the same city! I've discovered her blog for years when I searched online for Christmas holiday party ideas and realized that it lives locally! She and her husband host a merry Christmas with cousin Eddie party every year and have great ideas that you have to try. She also offers Christmas holiday party printables on her etsy site. This little fun carousel was a treasure I found on household goods two years ago to go along with a movie theme where cousin Eddie touches him and it falls apart. You can also find a selection of them here. You definitely need a squirrel on a tree or it's not an authentic Christmas holiday tree! I ordered this squirrel pet, but this one is even better priced and more cheap. Another few photos are free printables of Christmas holiday signs with quotes from the movie. I printed from this blog. I bought cheap frames from a dollar store and have them still stored in a Christmas box for every year we do party. You'll also see in these photos that I use an old-fashioned checkered tablecloth and stream multicolored Christmas lights with large light bulbs across the dining table. This was the only table decoration needed - because remember it's a cheap party! Now for the Christmas holiday food menu! These are the foods I served at our last party and will continue to stick to the menu. If it has a recipe, it is connected below. For a sign, I found screenshots of related scenes and copied them into a Word document then typed the name of the dish. I pin it to the bottom half of the document so I can fold it in half to create a tent that would stand on its own. Simple. I'd love to hear what Christmas themed menu ideas you mean! O! Roy Puppy Chow - In honor of Eddie's dog cousin, Snots, we name our usual Muddy Buddies recipe O! Roy Puppy Chow. Everyone loves this traditional chocolate peanut butter Chex mix! Aunt Bethany's Jello Mold – There is no recipe for this one, and it is pretty much not to eat and just for fun. I made green jelly-O mold with bits of cereal to mimic cats in case anyone really wanted to eat them. Unfortunately, the cereals dissolved in jelly, so I threw a few of them in the sky. UPDATE: For our second annual party, I made a real edible (and tasty!) jelly mold. The recipe can be found here. Pepper Jelly Moon Dip - That was my original idea. Pepper jelly dip is a dish I know guests will eat, so I incorporated it into the theme this way and served with crackers. Clark Bars – One of my favorite ideas was to have these Clark bars on the table. One day, I came to Michael's and saw clark bars on the check-in line. I ordered a box of 24 bars on Amazon and sent them home as favors. This box is already available. Maybe I'll order this instead. Tylenol M & M - This is a white M & M (or chocolate candies bought in bulk) mimic Tylenol. a year I could serve them in a real Tylenol marked container. Mary's Luscious Slush Punch - This soft drink was a tribute to Mary - from a department store clark also dreamed of. This slush punch is excellent and easy to throw together, then stick in the freezer until ready to serve. Recipe coming soon. Eggnog - At this party I served non-alcoholic eggnog without eggs, but this year I plan to get a popular alcoholic eggnog. This year I also have a couple of moose mugs to use so I'm excited to add them to the mix! We had other inerale foods such as chocolate biscuits, popcorn, Chex mix, salami, cheese, grapes etc. Since it's a movie viewing party, I tried to stick to snacks and finger food for easy movie viewing. I hope this post will help you plan your own National Lampoon Christmas holiday party! I can't wait to share photos and other ideas from this year's party soon!
