American creator Lyda D. Newman is a patented African American creator and involves activists for female suffering. She is known for her durable hairbrush creations. [1] Lyda D. NewmanNationalityAmericanOccupationinventor and activistKnown forActivist for female suffering. Creates and creates a durable hair brush and can be taken apart for cleaning. Newman was born about 1865 and 1885 in Ohio,[1] but there was no information about his exact date of birth or death. [2] He spent most of his life living and working in Manhattan, New York City, especially in the San Juan Hill neighborhood. [2] Records show that he may have mixed race as he was mercilessly cited recording his race as a startto and black on various paperwork. [2] Throughout his life, Newman's main occupation was hair care as he listed hair specialists or hairdressers in various New York City Directories and the Federal and New York City government censuses. [2] [4] In addition to his work in New York City, Newman appears to have worked with hair in Newport, Rhode Island, during the summer months. Newport Daily News contained the following ads on July 20, 1903, edition: LYDA D. NEWMAN, NEW YORK. HAIR and SCALP expert, Begs to announce that he has arrived for the ninth season at Newport and will be happy to receive calls from those wanted treatment. My original method of magnetic manipulation positively cures nervous fatigue. Specialty shampoo. 56 BATH ROAD. [7] Patents and inventions In the late 1800s, Newman created a hair brush that could be taken apart easily for cleaning because it contained compartments on the bottom that could be removed from behind and cleaned. [8] [10] The United States Patent 614,335[11] was filed on 11 July 1898 and granted on 15 November 1898. The hairbrush he created is described in his patent as simple and durable in construction and very effective when used. [11] See the gallery for hair brush diagram. Newman was familiar with the U.S. Patent Office before filing a patent for his brush. On July 17, 1894, the issue of the Official Gazette of the United States Patent Office, page 126, issued a Trademark number 25,022 mentioned for the name VIDACABELLO, PREPARATION FOR HAIR AND SCALP. LYDA D. NEWMAN, New York, N.Y. Filed June 19, 1894. The 'important feature' of the Trademark is the word VIDACABELLO. Used since August 1892. [12] And created his patented invention, Newman was an active community member and organizer for female suffering in the early 20th century. As a drowning person, he spent his time canvassing neighborhoods in New York City, hosting street meetings to educate passing people, and to support the New York Women's Suffering Party. Newman started starting The Office of Suffering in Manhattan. [2] On August 29, 1915, the New York Times declared under the Center for Suffering for Negroes, the Women's Suffering Party was to open a women's suffering headquarters for people of color at 207 West Sixty-third Street on Wednesday. This will look after Miss Lyda Newman, who did excellent work for suffering among her own people. The official mother will be decorated gayly with posters, flags and penstrim. Many women of colour have been asked to play host to the new chief executive while Miss Newman went canvassing among voters in the area (sic). [13] On Thursday, September 2, 1915, the New York Times followed up with a second news blurb under The Negro Suffrage, the official mother for negro suffering work opened at 207 West Sixty-third Street that evening with a large open meeting outside the building. Miss Lyda D. Newman is responsible for those works, and will continue canvassing and organizing street meetings through the Thirteenth Assembly Area from now until election day. Dr. Mary Halton and Miss Portia Willis were among the speakers that evening. Sixty-third Street opened overnight as a trafficless street from 3 to 9 P.M., and mothers were picked up to the officials' mothers and watched their children play from the window (sic). [14] In 1924, seven years after women's suffering was achieved in 1917, Lyda Newman could be found in the 51st election district for a list of New York City voters as registered voters. NewmanAfrican-American hairdresser and creator Lyda Newman patented a better hairbrush design in New York City in 1898.Lyda Newman, who was born in Ohio circa 1885, was an African-American creator and female rights activist. A hairdresser with trade, she received a patent for a better model of the hairbrush in 1898. He also fought for women's rights to working with well-known women's suffering activists. Newman lived much of his adult life in New York City.Little is known about the life of Lyda D. Newman. According to official bancian record, he was born in Ohio around 1885. In the late 1890s, he was a New Yorker Population. In 1898, Newman applied to a U.S. patent for a new style of hairbrush. He received a patent on November 15, 1898. Her hair brush design includes several features for efficiency and hygiene. It has a completely spaced feather row, with an open slot to guide the debris away from the hair into a dispersed compartment, and a back that can be opened on the touch of a button to clean the compartment. In 1915, Newman was mentioned in a local newspaper for his suffering work. He is one of the organizers of the African-American Branch of the Women's Suffering Party, which struggles to give women the legal right to vote. Working on behalf of his African-American female colleagues in New York, Newman attacked his neighborhood to raise awareness of the cause and organised an affliction meeting in his voting district. The leading white suffering of the Women's Suffering Party is cooperating with the Newman group, hoping to bring voting rights to all New York female residents. Records of the 1920 and 1925 government census confirmed that Newman, then aged in his 30s, lived in an apartment building on Manhattan's West Side and worked as a hairdresser to a private family.
