A high school football team in Maine shows people what can be achieved when players from different cultures set aside their differences and work together. The city of Lewiston was 96 percent white in 2000, when an influx of about 7,000 immigrants, many of them from Somalia, began arriving at the turn of the century, causing tension within the existing community. How a football team brought together a divided city. 27, 201804:10 I think everyone looked at them with a kind of blinking eye, head football manager Mike McGraw told The Geena Bush Hager on Tuesday today.McGraw, a lifelong Lewiston resident who coached the team for 35 seasons, helped integrate the existing team of newcomers and players into a powerful football team that brought pride to the city and sent a message about the importance of the team's work. The moving story of Lewiston High School's Blue Devils is detailed in a new book published Tuesday by author Amy Bass called One Goat: Coach, Team, and the game that brought a city divided together. Bass is the wife of today's production management manager Author Amy Bass writes about the powerful story of the Lewiston football team in its new book. Today this team plays football like Mayne has never seen before, but it's more than that, Bass told Hoard. It's about the community, it's about their families, it's about refugees around the world. And it's about America kind of figuring out how to live up to the ideals he writes on paper on a daily basis. McGraw saw the addition of immigrant players as an opportunity to improve the program rather than as a gimma. Many of the players from Africa Grew up playing football and already had a strong love for the game. They're like a spectrum of opportunities because they're all so completely different, he said. The biggest challenge was merging a companion team out of a group of teenagers who would often separate themselves by racial lines. Veteran coach Mike McGraw helped shape players from different backgrounds into one of Maine's top programs. Today I knew if I could get them to mix up their skills and mix their intensity and mix the things they do really well, I knew we'd have success, he said. He was just like, you know, you guys gotta do this together. You're doing this together. When we run, you do it together, said teammate Mohamed Khalid, who started playing soccer as a kid in Kenya.Lewiston emerged as a reign when he reached the regional championship game in 2012 and 2013 and then won it in 2014, before rising to another level a year later. The Blue Devils won the state championship in 2015, finishing 18-0 and ranked in the top 25 in the nation with a team that includes players from six different states. The Blue Devils have celebrated two championships in the last three seasons. Today it was one of the happiest times of my life, the actor Muhammad Khalid told Hagar. It was a source of pride for everyone, Bass said. Lewiston returned in 2017 and won another first-class title with a 0:1 victory in overtime, but it was more than just the results on the field. I feel the football has really helped integrate the city, said teammate Bilal Hersie. Lewiston's football team has become a source of pride in a community that has absorbed a large influx of immigrants since 2000. Today football just brings us all together, added teammate Jeremy Heffler. The Blue Devils provided a plan for success in a community that could have entered division and tension. The only thing that enjoys the different cultures is that if they really talk to each other, they find out they're more alike than they are different, McGraw said. Follow TODAY.com Stump and Today producer Josh Weiner on Twitter. Nothing like a little fresh air and nature to give you an instant energy boost, take that away from me. Life in New York means that your exposure to real nature —trees, plants, natural bodies of water, etc.—is extremely limited. When I find a patch of grass in the park to relax in, it's a rare and exciting event. That's why I was so ready to join a hiking trip with [link href = destination = .blank link_updater_label =external]Bound Outdoor, an amazing adventure company. They offer all kinds of excursions from one day trips to night camping trips, as well as some really creative options such as a yoga high ridge trip or horseback riding and wine tasting. The cost is very reasonable, and travel to and from any location Provided. I recently took part in a Watting Falls trip in Minavska National Park in upstate New York. Martin, our amazing guide and knowledge led our group on a 8.1-hour hike through the woods, up the mountain ranges and, finally, to a breathtaking waterfall. My friend Susan joined me and we had an amazing experience. We both really needed a break from the madness of our daily lives and this trip was perfect. Not to mention the fact that we have a great workout! We will never share your private information during number 100 in any country. If not, find the nearest national park in the nps.gov out of town! I promise you will feel better, happier and fresher after a day (or just a few hours) in the wild. Now, I'm going to let the pictures speak from here because words really can't accurately describe what we've experienced... On top of the mountain! It's so windy, and yet, we're so happy! Another amazing view from above. Amazing Minnewaska Lake in perfect weather we made it to the waterfall! So worth it! Thank you outside committed to a truly unforgettable day! My sanity (and hips) are grateful. - Avi Cuffey, assistant health editor this content was created and maintained by a third party, and imported on this page to help users provide their email addresses.
