Link to this page: Another thing he needs to explain is pentadactyl limbs, ancestral terrestrial vertebrate limbs, found in all tetrapod classes (vertebrates with appendages such as four legs, legs, or legs) from mammals to amphibians. Note that the PENTADACTYL below and its 12-letter spelling variant above result from a two-wordgram shift with the same shift; however, these last two words form a good mixed transdeletion, so an 11-letter example is not a trivial variant of a 12-letter example. Paleontologists have traditionally held that all soil vertebrates follow a five-digit pattern or pentadactyl. Flyers, herbivores and predators are pentadactyls that are not an unlikely evolution, but double digits on side flanges?
