Update Now View all the similar artists perfect hair forever is a lo-fi garage pop project from an annoying dude based in Auckland. Having posted a number of short releases online too year Perfect Hair Forever now released its first official full length OK COOL - on Crystal Magic Records. We caught up with a mysterious man discussing the project. Bratty soccer kids and adorable snakes with heavy reefs... Hey, how's it going? Howdy - no complaints How do you first get into making music? When I was in high school lused playing with a band of four girls - YEESH what a nightmare I really don't remember when and why we stopped, but I think everyone drifted that I just started recording stuff in my room. What/what are some of your influences? Buddy Holly is probably A No 1 - he wrote and produced his own material that had almost never happened before - Lou Christie/Perry Como is my Voice guys - feel like they are both pretty undervalued talents - I could go, but they are like dudes of the Holy Trinity to me. What have you been listening to mainly lately? A whole bunch of garbage - I'm pretty heavy on production, whatever sounds good - I just got into this this called braids - it's kind of like ramones, but as dystopian or something - toxic waste. When and what inspired you to start Perfect Hair Forever? Well I think it was around 2008 and I actually don't know why - I think I just wanted to make music again - I never actually wrote songs and so I just recorded some drums and then just improvised some guitar reef over it then made up the vocal spot - that's usually how I still write songs now I think. Have you participated in other music projects? In high school bands, nope - I think that after I started this I'm pretty sure that I like to work alone - kind of seems like a bad personal trait, but I can't help. I love the name, is there a story behind it? Yes, I just RIPPED IT OFF adult swim show haw haw. We heard something about you destroying your recording files when you post tracks online - what is the story? Haha oh man - well when I finish the song, I don't want to hear it anymore - I don't want to hear it again because I just heard it 50 times, and I recorded it - it's out of my hands when I put it online, so it's done - I don't want to be able to change it more so I make sense to get rid of itYou have a few short releases on Bandcamp - what can we expect from LP? It's all new things except the new version of Spit on Your Grave - It's really nothing like old stuff really - I kind of wanted it to sound like when a 12-year-old brat made some album with his football team or something. Tell us a little about your writing and recording process? So usually I just go over my phone, which is filled with two/three sentences and choose one - sit around thinking about it and write a few lyrics - sometimes I write it all in my head and try to match that or else I sit around with my guitar and see what happens. Are you still flying solo or are there some guests or collaborators on the new album? I was still flying solo, but my friend Sam invented me to record OK COOL and he did his thing too - Tuner Melts - CHECK IT OUT. Was there anything particular that affected the album, is it writing or recording? In some image of the brat kid - there are some songs on this album that are pretty heavy my standards and being this reef that I got into two songs - it just sounded really evil to me, so I wanted to do more songs so that what I picture a snake would listen to - like it could charm a snake out of the basket - so I just did some songs that were just groans or cries of vocals - I don't know I have zero grip on reality most of the time. The album is released by Crystal Magic Records - what do you hook up with them? I think this probably came through my friend Daif - the guy Fraser who this is a super nice dude and they've got a grade list. When we first contacted the years, you were determined to remain anonymous, or is that still the case? If not, who are you? Two words - zero reporting hahaha. Have you warmed to the idea of the game live at all since we last spoke? So good - me and a couple of guys, including that dude Sam I mentioned earlier, were playing in our friends' basement that could do a show at some point, but who knows when. What other plans do you have perfect hair forever? Well I finished OK COOL two months ago basically so just finishing another album - except that's not much. What are your thoughts on the local music scene? I kind of feel out of the loop - I didn't go to that many gigs - I think there are only fewer bands right now - I'm probably the wrong person to ask.....OK COOL is now and can download it for free through the Crystal Magic Records bandcamp below. below.
