to play the Truth about Tetris : You can never beat Tetris Online! History Suddenly, the virus paralyzed the Computer Center of the Academy of Sciences in Moscow. The Russian computer technology center, home to the elite Eastern Bloc developers, the place where the trajectories of Nuclear Winter and Sputnik are calculated - is completely flawed. It was a very dangerous virus: it did not infect the computer - but the human sitting in front of it. For hours, days, weeks, they stared blankly at their screens, unable to do their jobs. It spread like the Virus Everything started in the spring of 1984. Alexej Paschitnow, a young programmer at the Academy, began developing computer games in time The plan: Pentamino, Pentamino, puzzles to animate on the computer. When Paschitnow gets his first version of the game and runs, something magical happens: albeit without sound and color, it immediately captivates him. At first I thought there was something wrong with me, he recalled in the BBC documentary 'Tetris' - From Russia with Love, I couldn't stop playing. But soon Paschitnow realized that it wasn't just him. Each of his colleagues, which he showed the game, immediately tied up. After a while Tetris, as Paschitnow did while it baptized the game, ran on almost any central computer computer - hardly any work was done. From there, the virus spreads like an epidemic. Paschitnow's colleagues have passed the program. Two weeks after the first test, the game went on every computer in Moscow, Paschitnow recalled. From Moscow, the game first conquered Russia, then, gradually, all the other Soviet states. The epidemic stops at the Iron Curtain - for now. How Does Tetris Develop? 1984. Russian scientist Alexey PaZitnov developed in the Soviet Union a game for computer Electronica 60, which was produced in Russia 1985. Tetris expanded to IBM PCs and quickly expanded throughout the Soviet Union. 1987 Tetris arrives in America with a PC with a logo in Cyrillic Russia. In 1988, Tetris arrived in a new form in Japan, and thanks to bullet-proof software support, tetris was only sold in over two million copies and became an instant hit in Japan and America. In 1989, Nintendo purchased the Tetris license, and he on the Game Boy platform had tremendous success, selling more than 35 million cartridges. That same year, Tetris received four Software Oscars, through four awards for outstanding work and software contribution. 1992. Tetris is recognized as a game that contributes to the development and function of the brain and the better part of its function, which is scientifically confirmed. 1996. The Tetris Company, which owns exclusive rights to Tetris, was established, and standards were set for the game to evolve. 1997. Tetris gets a new logo, which is still in use today. 2002. Tetris development for mobile devices started in Blue Java company. 2005. EA (Electronic Arts) bought Blue Jav and along with a 15-year license to develop Tetris games. Tetris Unblocked Game Tetris owes its popularity to mobile phones, where it was one of the main games in the monochrome screen moment until 2002, and today is also a big hit but in a new and more modern package. You can play Tetris online for free on the web at no cost or install complicated software. All I can say is Tetris is an absolute classic among computer games. Game.
