Green day drummer solo

In this free video drum lesson, I want to show you how to play a drum solo that occurs at 2:50 on Bang Bang sung by Green Day featuring drummer Tre Cool. Green Day is back with a new album and a single, and it's as kick-ass as we'd hoped. Tre also gives us a little drum solo in the middle of a new song! Solo features some of Tre's favorite drum licks and just goes to show you how something simple can sound pretty amazing when playing fast! Don't forget to download the free PDF below... This is a very cool and exciting drum solo that most drummers believe can go to cloning without too much trouble. It's every single stroke, and it's just tempo and orchestration that makes this a little tricky. There are also a few Tre Cool's signature licks featured in the solo, so even if you can't play the entire solo, you can at least get a few tre-cool licks in this lesson. The drum solo, played by Tre Cool in Green Day's Burnout Song, is undoubtedly one of Tre Cool's great drum performances. He really pulls out all the stops with the armity of solo. The great thing about Tre is that his drum licking has a kind of orientation that the average drummer can choose and learn without too much effort. He is the drummer of the people if you like due to his open included licks and tricks. Anyone can go! But he plays very fast and so that simple idea is something else when you speed up the tempo of the song. This drum solo is out of reach of the average drummer, but with a little patience and meticulous practice. So I can take a look at it now... Watch the video on YouTube here how to play burnout drum solo - learn how to play drum burnout solo video drum lessons (green & Tre Cool) This drum solo occurs in 1 minute 23 seconds on the song. Each of the four lines of the drum solo begins with a cymbal sting that collides with the same snair. The snair drums are played on beats 2 and 4 and the bass drums and clash cymbals are played around. The first drum fill bar (Line 2's Bar 2) is simply a line of sixteen notes played between the snair drum and the high Tom RLRL. The last beat of the bar (beat 4) is played on the snair drum (RLRL). Bar 2 on Line 2 features three note figures that let Tre play two 16th notes and then rest one. The bass drum plays the eighth note down across the entire bar (1 + 2 + 3 + 4 +). The hand started on the snair drum, then moved around Tom Tom and ends with Tom on the floor. Bar 2 in line 3 is simply the entire line of the sixth note, playing RLRL using the back three note figure. One note on the snair drum and then two notes between high Tom and middle Tom. Because you can get your hands alternately, and Tom tom alternates, too. The bar is solved on two snair drum notes and a 4+ of beats. The last line of the solo starts with the previous three songs and moves to the 16th note rhythm. Beat 1 is the flam notes of the snair drum, and more snair drum notes move across the beat of the bar. The bar ends with Tre's signature fill on the song, with the 16th note triplet starting at Medium Tom and ending on the floor Tom. The tre moves to chorus 3 of the song as shown below. It made me think about drumming in other Green Day songs, and I thought I'd ask you guys here which song they think has the best/some of their favorite drum parts. Here are some of my favorites: Burnout's Drum Solo, Miss You and Bang Bang fills up somewhere through frantic drums at the ending and now the death of american idiots after each chorus of American idiots, all the drums on East 12th Street (probably the best bit of all the drums of American idiots) (bonus live performances) live version of 16 where Tre goes crazy around.
