Concert ticket resale sites

Whether it's a hot concert in your area or the football game of the year, it's a long way from the time you had to queue three days before the wickets even opened. Of course, some people still do, but browsing the best ticket sites out there would be the modern way to sort things out, whether you're after sporting events, featured artists or live music. Now, what are the best websites to buy your favorite tickets? Top 10 ticket sites

1. Seatgeek Created in 2009, Seatgeek is a mobile platform that brings users and events together. Fans can purchase tickets for all kinds of events, including plays, live concerts, music events and sports. They buy tickets from other fans who are trying to get rid of theirs. When shopping, there are many features available, such as interactive seat maps, the ability to use e-tickets or event navigation. Since Seatgeek features is primarily aimed at mobile users, it has its own application - easy to use and intuitive. You'll notice that all offers have their own scores - a low score implies that the seat is somewhere behind a post or too far from the stage. You can get results from other third-party sites too, offering even more opportunities. There's a major drawback though - you can't look for the best deal possible, but you'll have to navigate it yourself. The good news is to do it is not so bad - pretty simple. Buying and selling can be a matter of minutes. It is not among the best ticket sites when it comes to selling so - 20% commission. Tickets are delivered electronically, but you can also print them yourself. Easy-to-use Benefits and Intuitive Interactive Seat Map Shows results from third-party websites suitable for mobile users and office cons sales commission higher than that on other Seatgeek platforms might be more expensive than other top players, but its features make it worth it.

2. StubHub StubHub is one of the best ticket sites in terms of diversity - you can find tickets to the best events from all over the world. Most of them are linked to shows - national tours and international acts. However, fans will be delighted to find tickets for small local concerts, shows and venues as well. Tickets never seem to sell on StubHub. StubHub features is easy to use and intuitive. This is one of the few sites that have put all the costs together - some around 28 per cent. Other websites list two to five different fees, which can cause confusion. When it comes to sales tax, sellers will pay 10% of the price. Buyers will love the feature to find the best tickets available too. Just as you've probably already guessed, there are no returns. StubHub has its own app too. When searching, you get suggestions based on your location. The FanProtect guarantee offered by StubHub ensures you get your tickets before the event. If you no, you get a full refund or even better tickets - up to you. The app also lets you track your favorite artists, so you can receive notifications whenever there's an event in your area. Pros FanProtect Guarantee Can search for the best local suggestions available Easy to buy or sell Cons users must provide card details in order to see the final price StubHub is a leading player because of its diverse features, which ensure the perfect seats.

3. Ticketmaster Ticketmaster is probably the most reputable website in the industry. More and more people are not even trying to buy tickets locally, but they go directly to Ticketmaster - widely advertised on radio and television as well. In addition to musical performances, the portal has tickets for live sporting events as well. Features Ticket fees depend on location and artist - in general, prices appear to be lower than at other sites. It should be mentioned that this is a main broker, which means that each ticket is negotiated with the place. There are more delivery options - electronically or physically. The physical solution is more expensive though. You can find the best tickets on the actual website or via the app - anything that's more convenient for you. You can transfer tickets, resell them or even return them within three days - with certain restrictions, of course. The website and app are easy to use, while the purchase takes a minute. Average service charges are just under 20%. Benefits Excellent Prices Many Events Return Policy The ability to transfer tickets to friends Disadvantages No opportunity to sell tickets, but there are a few options to resell tickets you just bought While not the cheapest or most advanced site, Ticketmaster is probably the most reputable, which gives it some extra credibility.

4. TicketNetwork TicketNetwork is one of the industry's underrated sites. You can find the best ticket if you do the right search. He sells tickets to live concerts, music shows, sporting events, theatre shows, plays and lectures - you name him and he's probably there. Tickets come from multiple sources - agencies, sponsors, venues and even others. TicketNetwork features can be used on desktop platforms, as well as mobile phones - it has its own app too. Regardless of what you use, you can find a list of cheap tickets too much hassle. The portal is easy to navigate, while the checkout process takes only a few minutes. People can both buy and sell tickets - unfortunately, only those in the U.S. can sell on TicketNetwork for now. There are no refunds unless the show has been cancelled - the reasons are irrelevant. Tickets are delivered electronically, but you can print them for peace of mind. Under certain circumstances, tickets may be physically sent to FedEx. To sell a ticket, you to pay 20% off its selling price if it goes. In addition, buying more tickets will inevitably give you adjacent seats if possible - by default. Benefits Easy to use and intuitive Instant Delivery of tickets by e-mail 100% refund guarantee well-informed customer service Disadvantages No live chat support for TicketNetwork emergencies is the hidden gem of this industry - underestimated, but fully presented and ready to put you in the perfect seats.

5. TicketLiquidator TicketLiquidator is not among the best players on the market, but some of its offers can certainly match the major online brokers. The broker specializes in concert tickets, but you can also find sporting events or live shows - especially at reputable venues, rather than local venues. It does a pretty good job of recommending shows in your area too - you'll need the location on. TicketLiquidator features trying to compete with major ticket sites by improving on a regular basis. For example, it recently launched its own app too. While the site is easy to navigate and simple, the app is a bit clumsy and can waste a bit of time. You can get your tickets delivered in more ways - electronically and physically. There is a guarantee of a refund if they do not arrive on time. Tickets can be resold for a 10% fee if they go. Other than that, the average fee is 25%. It is a bit high compared to the site better rated, but at least it is flat and it does not depend on the place or the artist. The interactive seat map is one of its main advantages - you can determine if the price is just based on the view. Ideal Benefits for Selling and Reselling Interactive Seat Card Good for Music Concerts Multi-Delivery Options Disadvantages Not Best for Other Types of Events - ideal for music concerts although TicketLiquidator is a choice for music concerts - even lesser-known events by local artists.

6. Live Nation Live Nation is one of the main choices when it comes to finding a ticket to a concert. It specializes in live concerts, but you can find events from other industries too. Unlike other websites, Live Nation has a relatively small database, which means tickets sell out fairly quickly - you need to keep an eye on these sites as soon as your favorite artists announce a tour or performance. Live Nation features can be viewed on its official website, as well as on an app. The site has everything you might need it if - fun and professional standards. It is easy to use and search, while buying and paying for a ticket should take you less than a few minutes. You can also find the best tickets listed on other websites, including the competition. Users cannot sell a ticket on Live Nation, but it is easy to buy and compare the market. You have interactive seat maps, as well as location maps, parking passes and full disclosure of all seats Entries. Deliveries are electronic, but you can also get physical deliveries if you buy from another website advertised on Live Venue. Fees vary from source to source. Pros Site Highly Professional Easy to Use Ticket Lists from Multiple Sources Interactive Map Seats Against Tickets Sell Pretty Quickly Live Nation can be considered a niche portal - specializing in concerts, including less popular artists or venues. 7. TicketCity In the business for more than 30 years, TicketCity has always been a secondary broker. It may not be the leading name in this industry, but it is among the best sites to find a ticket or at least to compare offers. It is safer than most of its competitors because it offers a refund guarantee if your tickets are not genuine or they are not delivered before the actual event. It specializes mainly in music concerts and live shows. Features The website is simple to use, but it comes with a basic search function - not too many criteria to look for. Like other ticketing sites, it provides an interactive seating map. When buying a ticket, you can also opt for a parking pass. Not all tickets are electronic - some of them must be physically sent. You'll know right away if you can buy an emergency ticket or if you have to wait for your ticket to be shipped. You can buy and sell tickets. The fees for sellers are lower than on other websites, but they depend on the location or artist. Whether it's buying or selling, the site is user-friendly and intuitive. The checkout process should only take a few minutes. It should be mentioned the fact that TicketCity has its own app too. In fact, the app may seem easier to use than the website, as access to the site is more effective when searching for events. Pros Money back guarantee Can buy or sell tickets Easy to use low fee app for sellers Disadvantages Not a main ticket broker TicketCity provides security and a good return policy, while the costs are quite low due to being a secondary broker. 8. VividSeats VividSeats is one of the best options when searching for a ticket, mainly because of its rewards program - one of the leading programs in the industry. For example, you can buy seven tickets throughout a year and the eighth ticket will be free. You're seeing the same artist for the second time in a year? Your ticket comes with a 5%. You'll also get various discounts if you buy more tickets, so don't hesitate to gather your best friends. The feature fees are a little higher than on other websites - about 27%, but the best part about it is that ticket prices are quite low, so it pays to take a look. You can buy tickets to music events, sporting events, theatre shows and so on. The website is simple and has a good search function, but you can also use the smartphone app - easier to use and a more efficient location to find events in your area. Looking for an event and buying a ticket should take a few minutes if you know what you want. Do you have any questions about a ticket or a show? VividSeats has knowledgeable customer service - more importantly, you have a live chat feature, which is the best option for ticket emergencies. There are no returns, while finding the best price available is not an option - you will have to browse the results yourself. Easy-to-use Benefits - Both the website and the app The ability to chat live to a customer service representative Good value/price Seat Card Disadvantages No ability to search for the best prices VividSeats dominates the market when it comes to rewards and bonuses, despite the lack of some features. 9. Viagogo Viagogo is one of the best sites on the ticket market. Expanded in 2006, he was one of the first players to achieve international success on the Internet. It has grown in more than 160 countries and has partnered with the best suppliers around the world. It is no longer a website, but a platform of more than 60 sites adapted to specific regions of the world. When it comes to event types, you can find sports, music, shows and conferences. Viagogo features is among the best stocked sites out there, whether you want to reach a Champions League final or an Ariana Grande concert. Finding and buying tickets is a painless process - a matter of minutes. The crate is simple too. What really makes the difference is the search function, which allows you to change the region or currency, among others. Many options are available in search results, while others are available at the bottom of the website. You can also pay by PayPal, while registration is optional - the best feature if you don't want to use it too often. The fees are relatively low, but the site is primarily designed for buyers, rather than sellers. There are, of course, also sales opportunities. You can get electronic or physical tickets. There is a guarantee of a refund if something goes wrong. Easy-to-Use Benefits Many Events Good Search Feature Application Intuitive Application Cons Strange water queuing system once you find a ticket - can take up to 10 minutes Viagogo may seem a bit out of date by missing some good features, but its costs are worth it. 10. TicketsNow Although launched independently as one of the best sites to buy TicketsNow is actually part of the Ticketmaster family - it is one of its best affiliates on the market. Compared to other websites, it becomes a secondary broker without too many extras, but it's still a good place to compare prices and find deals that you may not be able to find elsewhere. TicketsNow features has some of the best fees out there - lower than most of its competitors. You can also find that sold on other primary portals without the price to go high. People can both buy and sell on TicketsNow - the selling fee is 15%. The website is secure and easy to use, while the return policy is different from TicketMaster's. There is no application either. Finding and buying the best ticket should only take a few minutes. Questions? The customer service is pretty fast. There is no live chat though, but the FAQ section will give you answers to most questions. Finding the best seats might be a bit tricky without an interactive map, but it's worth digging deeper if you find a top-notch deal. Pros Simple website and painless experience Section FAQ detailed Cheap service charges Can buy and sell Cons tickets Incapable of looking for the best deal While under the aegis of Ticketmaster, TicketsNow has built an identity for itself based on a simple experience and low fees. Last words Bottom line, these are by far the best ticket sites on the market and each of them comes with its own peculiarities. All in all, their ultimate goal is the same - to find the best tickets and the best seats. It may be wise to simply browse through them when they are interested in a particular event, only to compare offers before spending your money. Money.
