Originally published in the September 2015 issue of Parents magazine. Free school utensils can help ease the burden of school costs that many families face. With the cost of school materials increasing and the number of materials required from schools going up, it costs more and more to buy school utensils each year. If you have a few school-age children, your costs can easily reach hundreds of dollars per year. Whether you're a parent who can't find money in your budget to buy school supplies this year, or you're trying to stretch your budget, look below to find some ways you can get free school supplies for your kids this year. Your first step to getting free school items must be to contact your child's school. Usually schools will buy more utensils every year that they can offer to families who can't afford them. Sometimes teachers themselves will use part of their classroom budget to buy more utensils for their students. If you don't have any luck with your child's personal school, you'll want to contact your school district. Many school districts have established programs where the community can donate school supplies that they can then provide to families who need them. If they don't have a setup program, they may have information about city-level programs that offer free school supplies. Reaching out to the community should be your next step in getting free schooling. All sorts of organizations set up programs to provide learning utensils, you'll just need to find out who they are in your community. You can contact your local news stations and newspapers. These are the organizers who give out contact with school supplies when they want to get word out about their program. If your local media are not aware of any programs, they will most likely be able to do footwork to figure out where the programs are. Other places that regularly set up free school offering programs include local universities, churches and charities such as American Volunteers and United Way. If you're an army family, Operation Homefront partners with Dollar Tree each year to provide free backpacks and school supplies. You can sign up Back-to-School Brigade to take advantage of this amazing program. If you are looking to stretch back your school budget, watching for free after discount deals will help you score quite a few free school utensils. Many stores offer free after discount deals on school supplies and you will need to view your Sunday circular to see if there are any deals during the week. Staples has a program called Easy Rebates that makes it really easy to get free school gear in July and August. Items after free discounts can make the store money because a lot of people forget to post in discounts. Make sure you post your discount so that you get your money back or your school supplies won't be free after all. Don't hesitate to take advantage of school supplies after a free discount isn't on your child's school offer list this year. Put it off for next year or better yet, donate it. Back to school shopping is big business for stores and they are looking to get you in and spend money. They will often have doorbusters to get you in the door. They hope you buy all your school supplies there but that doesn't mean you have to. OfficeMax/Office Depot and Staples regularly have school equipment on sale for 1¢, 10¢, 50¢, and $1. Sometimes they also have coupons in their ads to help you save more money. If you're like most parents, you have a drawer or even a wardrobe full of school utensils that you've bought in the past but you probably won't need it again. Consider organizing a school supplies exchange where parents in your school district or neighborhood bring school supplies they don't need and exchange them for the people they do. If you can't get free school utensils, you can definitely get them cheap. To do that, you need to shop in multiple places, see ads, and use coupons. If you go to one place and get all the school supplies you need, you will have to pay more than you have to. You'll want to start watching newspaper ads in July and start visiting each store to get only really good offers. Pay special attention to the Walmart, Kmart, Big Lots, Target, Walgreens and grocery store ads for back-to-school sales. These stores will have a few items that are a particularly good deal every week. If you do not receive a newspaper, you can view and subscribe to all online ads. Coupons are a great help in saving school utensils as well. See your Sunday newspaper coupons and Coupons.com to see if there are pop-up coupons for school utensils. Combine them with a sale and you will save some cash. Another way to save on school utensils is to take advantage of tax-free weekends that many states must help reduce the cost of school utensils and other items back to school. Now it's time to get free schooling utensils next year. Your child will always be asked to bring basic items such as pencils, crayons, and as some of their school er utensils each year. When you see a good deal, buy some extras that you can use for next year. In fourth grade, students begin to establish a foundation for developing research skills, writing skills, and critical reading skills. The supplies listed here are typical of the tools students will use to learn fourth grade skills. As always, you should check with your teacher to identify the specific supplies you will need. Pencil No. 2 Students will undergo multiple pencils and erasers in fourth grade, so it is important to keep a full supply indoors. Un caught unseeded eraser! Planning time management skills are important for success in fourth grade, as students often find homework more organizational and planning required than ever before. Color pocket folders Teachers often require separate folders for individual objects. Adhesives In the fourth grade, the subjects can be separated in an adhesive. Some teachers encourage students to keep time management support in adhesives. Broadly ruled paper This type of paper is usually required for essay exercises. Highlight Students start using highlighters to mark important information on study sheets and notes. Red Pen In grade 4, students can start changing papers for marking. Red pens and pencils are used to mark other students' homework. Pencil box It is important to keep held. Backpacks Many schools require students to use clear backpacks. Pencil Grinder You will need one for the test day! Bookmarks You will read more advanced books. Crayons Students begin geography studies in fourth grade in much more detail. Crayons will be used for maps and other projects. The Student Ruler begins working with the graph in the fourth grade. Photoology is also a subject students will explore in some depth. Flashcards Students begin to learn concepts in mathematics such as the order of activity. It is important for students to fully remember the staffing tables. Table.
