Related: How to teach Rhyming Dr. Seuss birthday is March 2, so it's always fun to have a Dr. Seuss theme at preschool around that date. Lots of books to read, invented words to speak, and of course a ton of rhymes. Below you will find a variety of engaging and practical Dr. Seuss activities for kindergarten and kindergarten. I have to tell you, the older kids I know enjoyed trying a lot of these ideas too! Even if you don't get into a Dr. Seuss theme around his birthday, the ideas below could help you plan some book studies with your students. I know I like to dive into books with kids! Don't forget the free printable lesson planning sheet at the bottom of this post. Preschool Dr. Seuss Activities for the Cat in the Hat These activities were all inspired by the classic Cat in the Hat. Choose a few that your students would like, or try each one! Cat in the Hat Play Dough Invitation Everything is better with playdough. At least, that's what the kids seem to think. Try our cat in hat activities with playdough. You can either make your own red and white playdough, or just take it in the store. Then ez the playdough with a variety of loose pieces and observe what the kids are doing. Be sure to incorporate literacy with lots of rhymes. Diy Dress Up A few years ago we had a Dr. Seuss dress up day in kindergarten. The students dressed like Things 1 and 2 of The Cat in the Hat. It was a simple activity, but the kids (and teachers!) enjoyed it. It was a simple way to integrate mathematics and literacy into a Dr. Seuss theme, too. Making a Cat Hat This simple activity is a success every time. Simply cut red strips of construction paper, with a basic hat shape from white paper. Let the kids make patterns of red and white, or just let them design their own hat for the cat! To go further, you should consult still playing school's Cat in the Hat name activity. I'm so in love with it (but I have one thing about fun name activities for kids). Matching the hats I've been using Joyfully Weary's hat matching activity for a few years now. Preschoolers see it as a puzzle to solve, and their observational skills get a nice workout. Seuss-tastic Treats For Fun Friday, one of our awesome parents makes a delicious fish snack in a bowl in honor of Seuss' Cat in the Hat. This idea came from the Dr. Seuss part of the Metzgars, which has even more fun inspired by Seuss. In case you're wondering, these treats were quite delicious! Mom at 2 Posh Lil Divas has some delicious cat in the fruit kabobs hat if you want a little more nutritious. Rhymes with magnetic letters For the ABC center, we talked about changing the words we know into new words. We started with cat, and the kids just had to change the first letter to make new words. We also talked about how the words rhymed because they sound the same at the end. Thing 1 and Thing 2 Puppets I've loved toddler approved puppets thing since I saw them! They are perfect for puppet shows, telling the story of The Cat in the Hat, and for small reading pointers for children. Fine engine hats for the Chat Living Montessori Now has a super simple setup (oh how simple I like!) for a fine motor hat activity for this book. You can focus on the end engine aspect of the activity, or you can choose to incorporate some math (such as patterns or color sorting) if you want. Dr. Seuss Activities for Preschoolers Who Love Lorax If children are wild on the Lorax, these ideas will be excellent book extension activities. Painting with your own Truffula trees I have to say, this is one of my favorite Dr. Seuss art projects to do with preschoolers! Use a few paper pom poms and straws to turn the Truffula tree into brushes. Then combine them with painting for a Seuss-inspired artistic experience for children. Lorax Mary Poppins Masks (one of my great former co-teachers) had fun helping the kids make Lorax-inspired masks. I was very amused to listen to his instructions from the other side of the room. Paint your face orange. Now stick your eyebrows on. Oh, wait, your mustache just fell to the floor! Yes, I'm easily amused. This is useful when you teach kindergarten! ☺ Truffula Trees This Lorax-inspired Dr. Seuss-inspired craft was a great pleasure to do with the kids! They were quite simple to make, and the kids had a great time making the colorful creations. Use them as writing tools or as part of an open playdough invitation. Make a Whisper-Ma-Phone This science activity inspired by Science Sparks' Lorax is perfect for preschoolers! You just need a few simple materials to do it, and it's not a difficult task. I imagine hours of fun with these in the dramatic play center. Truffula Forest Sensory Bin Lemon Lime Adventures has a great idea for a sensory tray inspired by the Lorax. I love the combination of fine motor skills, sensory play, and pretending to play! Lorax Cupcake Liner Craft Oh my word, this Lorax-inspired craft from I Heart Crafty made me smile! I haven't tried it yet, but it's on my list of Dr. Seuss activities and then try it. Can you imagine giving the kids these materials and just letting them create their own Lorax scene? I bet their imagination would bring some amazing creations! Truffula Tree Color Matching Show Truffula Trees fine vanessa Craft engine would be great in your preschool math center. Children's fingers get a great workout while they are on sorting the colors for their Truffula trees. Apples Up on Top Felt Board Buggy and Buddy has an impressive felt board activity for this book! I love the way it incorporates real pictures of children. In addition, the board's activities are so attractive to preschoolers. Fine Motor Math Preschoolers will love using clothespins and rules as part of Fun Learning for Kids' fine motor apple math activity. I can see individualized versions for each of the children and keep them in the math center all year round. Apples Up on Top Game Capitalize on children's love for games with Mama.Papa.Bubba's ten-apple math game. Its use of recycled bottle caps is great, and I'm sure you could use any red material you already have on hand for the game. More activities dr. Seuss for preschoolers Of course, Dr. Seuss has written a lot of books for children. Here are a few others we've enjoyed over the years. Make Colorful, Scented Oobleck Inspired by Bartholomew and the Oobleck, this fun oobleck scented recipe is sure to add fun to any Dr. Seuss theme! We kept calling it fragrant mud, but how to make mud with the kids is a whole other (also awesome!) concept. Go fishing! In the discovery/sensory table, the children used homemade fishing sticks to catch foam fish. This activity involved a fish, two fish, goldfish, blue fish. Painting a masterpiece that I often let the kids choose a favorite Seuss character to paint. The usual winner is this mischievous cat, and I like to see how their interpretations character reveal themselves! Fish Mathematics Children used Oopsey Daisy's graphic freebie to sort, graph, and count their goldfish during the snack period one day. It seems consistent, year after year, that children like to incorporate mathematics into their snack time. So add this idea to your Dr. Seuss theme or to your ideas for snack math for preschoolers.
