Foldables, or three-dimensional graphic organizers made by students, are a unique strategy that helps students read effectively and can also be used as evaluation or study tools. A reading guide, reading controls, and a summary in each chapter keep students on track as they learn to read to get information and process what they've read. The extensive use of graphics, maps and photography creates a visual/verbal approach that appeals to all your students. Relevance is part of each lesson Notebooks allow students to enter the past, learning about daily life at various times and hot topics from different eras. What life was like and Hands-On History fully engage students in learning and give them an understanding of the parallels between previous generations and their own. National Geographic brings its unparalleled expertise to every page Colorful, easy-to-read maps help students understand where and why the story. Geography and history features students like geography and events intertwine to create the history of a locality or nation. Continuous practice in social study skills The program emphasizes skills development, from map reading to analysis to analysis sources to explore the connections between history and geography, economy, government, citizenship and current events. Abundant opportunities for students to demonstrate competence The standardized test practice provides systematic and continuous test preparation. As your students learn, they are simultaneously preparing to demonstrate their knowledge of American history in standardized test formats.
