The pussycat song

Thank you for visiting my fundraising page. This March, I walk 10,000 steps a day throughout the month to beat cancer sooner. Help me walk everything through cancer and fund lifesaving research by sponsoring me. Riverdale is such a special show because all its moving parts are just as fun and each character gets his time to shine. While the original Archie comics on which the show is based often looked like the Archie-Betty-Veronica series, Riverdale gives fans a chance to get to know the rest of the world a little better. Josie and her Pussycats are a big part of that world, and Episode Six is Josie's spotlight episode, according to Ashleigh Murray, the actor behind the role. With the focus on the singer Thursday night, fans might wonder where they can listen to Josie and the Pussycats' Riverdale songs. And, the good news is, they're totally streamable. Right now, five Riverdale songs are on iTunes and Spotify and Murray says Bustle they're streaming on Apple Music too. Fans can stream and buy a cover of pussycats' Candy Girls, All Through The Night and Fear Nothing as well as two songs guest singed by Archie actor A.J. Kapa: Dance Dance Dance and The Song That Everyone Sings. And, I'm sure as the season goes on, more episodes will be added. Murray says she's glad everyone enjoys the music of the fictional band, but that singing is really just for her character. I accidentally got lucky to carry a melody, but it was never anything I wanted to follow, she says. People ask me, 'Oh, do you have any music out there?' And I'm like, no, no, I don't know. I happen to be writing. At the end of the day Murray says: I want to be an actor and if they need me to write, I will, but it's a happy gift. But just because Murray doesn't necessarily have his singing dreams doesn't mean we won't hear more from Josie. If we go into season two and hope there's more Josie and the Pussycats, there's definitely going to be more music, Murray teases. I, for one, can't wait. I've got a long car ride today to pick up my eldest son from college for the holidays. The last time I did it, just a few weeks ago, there were some ridiculous glitches - my headlight went out on the car, I wasn't paying attention to where my iPhone was telling me to go and I ended up in Boston, it was dark and rainy by the time I got where I was going. This time I'm ready: brand new GPS, brand new headlight, brand new layout (that is, I'm leaving early enough to still be light when I arrive)- and a brand new driving soundtrack, for when NPR gets boring or too static to listen to. I'm most excited. Music. A few weeks ago, I asked a bunch of friends via email and Facebook what their favorite breakup songs were - and ended up with the most fascinating mix of music. Some of the songs are dreamy and sad and witty - Linger Cranberries comes to mind, as does my personal fave in this category, All The Way Down, by Glen Hansard, from once. Some are thoughtful, like Wasted Time, by the Eagles. Others are perfect songs to turn around when you're angry as hell: For me, it would be Mary Chapin Carpenter's song He Thinks He'll Keep Her, for my friend Peter who would be You're So Vain Carly Simon - Is there another breakup song? he asked. I particularly appreciated being introduced to songs I'd never heard of, like Song for the Dumped, Ben Folds (great title!), and I love my friend Edith's choice, You're Breakin' My Heart by Harry Nilsson. So fun, so profae: You came to mind and you're breaking my glasses You want to drive my car Buy a lot of things I've had enough of - ooh! What's your favorite breakup song? I'd like to know.
