Learn More Robot Wants Fishy, the third game in the Robot series after Robot Wants Kitty and Robot Wants Puppy, is a 2D web game made with ActionScript 3.0, the Flixel library, and with music from DrPetter and Robbe. The game was released on the Armor Games website on August 20, 2010. It is also sponsored by Armor Games. The goal of Robot Wants Fishy is to rescue the goldfish in the shortest possible time. However, when you die there is a 10-second penalty. The game also features a humorous story that actually relates to the game this time! PowerupsEdit name Description of the image & area of the game found Robo-bombs Press X to drop bombs! Fragments of Cronox Each collected subtracts 5 seconds. Found in all areas of Teleport Crystal This would surely repair a disabled teleporter. It is located in an area that has just passed Dungeon S. Crab Dolemite Infusion increases the damage of the bomb. It is found in most areas. Tri-Prism briefly creates a prism over the robot (for 1 second) that refracts bullets. Reward for defeating the obtuse fisherman. Autoharpoon Can fire harpoons underwater. Found in Bat Cave. Tritium Warheads Causes bombs to explode over a larger area and double damage. Allows the Robot to damage the Battle Bat. It is located in the flooded depths Rustproofing A duck that allows the robot to swim underwater. Found in the Crystal Caverns. HaXXoR makes sad computers happy :) Reward for defeating Das Boxen Multibombs Increases the number of bombs the Robot can drop. Two of these upgrades can be found in the game, each increasing the number of bombs you fire in one. This makes a total potential of 3 bombs dropped at once. One is the reward for defeating Battle Bat, while the other is in Crystal Caverns. Super Golden Key This is what you need to unlock the cage where the Fishy resides. It is located in Crystal Caverns ??? Nothing! Absolutely nothing! It is found after destroying the blocks in the supply closet, near the double jump press Z double jump or in the air to jump twice. Found in the supply closet. Characters/EnemiesEdit The following information should be added to this page: Images! Image Name Description Robot This is the robot! It can only be damaged by hanging from the ceiling and throwing bombs into its core. AwardsEdit Robot Wants Fishy has twelve prizes, all of which count for its rank seen in the awards section of the game. Spoiler warning! This page contains information that could reveal plot secrets or ruin puzzles! Read with caution, or not at all! Robot got Fishy! Get some fish. Rocket Robot Get a fish in less than 20 minutes. Brave Little Robot Completes the game with only necessary power-ups. The friendly robot defeats Drillbaby without damaging more than 15 enemies. Time in your hands Collect all 50 fragments of Chronox. Fully charged Reach maximum firepower. Xenocide Kills all living things! (Except those annoying snails.) Yay Blow up everything explosions. Back At Ya Destroys an alien with a refracted shot. Super Combo Blow up 5 guys without touching the ground. Underwater operation Go through the thorny tunnel without a Jelly Toast scratch Blow a jellyfish with bombs. Trivia Das Boxen has the highest amount of health in the game, with 182HP for his entire battle. There is a multibomb item that has become notorious, as many players find it difficult to collect. A key mechanic they forget is that snail enemies can destroy crystals with their bullets. However, you also need the Tri-Prism object divert the bullet to the crystal that protects the multibomb. The names of the bosses are all word games: - Dungeon S.Crab is an alternative way to pronounce Dungeness crab, a crab found in Britain. - The Battle Bat has 'bat' appearing twice in Name. - PAL-1000 is based on the evil HAL-1000 robot from the film A Space Odyssey. - The Obtuse Anguso is a sign of an obtuse angle in mathematical terminology. - Das Boxen is supposedly German for The Boxes. However, the German used is inaccurate. The robot wants things, so go get it! This game is a compilation of the original 2010 Robot Wants games: Robot Wants Kitty, Robot Wants Puppy, Robot Wants Fishy, and Robot Wants Ice Cream. In addition, it includes Robot Wants Y!?, a mini-game that was actually the main banner on the JaysGames website for a while. And of course, Robot wouldn't want it all if we didn't add Robot Wants Justice, a new Robot adventure! Robot Wants pioneered the concept of mini-metroidvania - an adventure you play through more than an hour or less, collecting the powerups you need to go from scratch to Kitty along the way. And all with a ticking clock - speedruns are the goal! Each of the included games includes 2 alternative maps (an Easy map, which is sometimes not so easy, but we guarantee it is short! And a Remix map, which is never easy, or fast), and there are also 12 Mutators that allow you to transform the way the game plays in a variety of useful and horrible ways. High online scores to compete with your friends - each unique combination of mutators has a separate high score chart, so try to be the best in your specialty. The ultimate Metroidvania action - you can't even JUMP without first finding a power-up in some of these games. A massive store full of features and game modes to unlock as you play (with space money, not real money. No IAP or DLC here) Extreme Alien Blast in Robot wants Kitty intense kitten launch action in Robot wants crazy psychotic puppy bombing in Robot wants Fishy A unique combination of Metroidvania and RPG in Robot wants serious ice cream puzzles- solve action in Robot wants Y?!
