Mashiro is a world-renowned artist transferred to Suiko as the second year to learn how to draw. He intends to paint the manga. Apart from drawing, he instead relies heavily on others. Therefore, the lack of even the most basic common sense. As a result, Sorata Kanda had to always take care of Mashiro, to the point that she needed to practically dress her up, or she would go to school without clothes. Unwilling to pay attention in class, Mashiro has very poor grades. However, he was able to memorize what he could see at any time by thinking of it as a picture. To stay at school without fail, he memorizes answers for make-up exams sect, and get the perfect grade on all of them. All. Mashiro's body statistics are B79/W55/H78 in centimeters and B31/W21/H30 inches. It has been observed many times in the series that she is very beautiful and she also has a very thin physique. She had a pale skin accompanied by a red eye and long pale blonde hair that reached her waist. She is often seen in school uniforms (which consist of white collar short sleeve shirts, red tie, sky blue jackets, magenta light coated skirts with black stripe hem, white knee high socks, and brown dress shoes), otherwise in casual clothes. Mashiro's personality is a very good artist, but very horrible at everything because of the lack of any sense. He almost completely has no emotion, usually wears empty expressions and speaks in a dry way. Having a soft voice, Mashiro is a girl of a few words, because at times, she herself isn't sure what to think, let alone say. These features might suggest that he is autistic. He is eccentric, seemingly living in his own world. As a result, he usually responds to situations in an unconventional way and operates on morals that are very different from others. For example, at times, Mashiro gave Sorata encouraging words that left him confused rather than motivated. Mashiro can be considered an idealistic person, able to have faith in others easily and quickly be confident in the potential of others based on how hard the person is trying to achieve their goals. Despite being successful in practice, Mashiro cares little to fame or price. This trait allowed him to travel to Japan and become mangaka, leaving his drawing career without regret. Mashiro can become obsessive with his work, go no night of sleep and neglect a meal to complete the project. That said, Mashiro is easy to drive by food and in particular seems like a fond of baumkuchen cake. Sometimes, Mashiro allows his emotions to control his actions. This tends to occur because of the lack of any logical thinking that is otherwise. Like when Mashiro wanted to learn to cook to show affection for Sorata instead of finishing his manga chapter. For Sorata, it seemed as if she was wasting her time that she could be put in her manga for no reason, but it was completely due to her fundamental love for Sorata, and she wanted to delight her. Sorata's relationship Kanda Mashiro kisses Sorata on the cheek. Mashiro forged a close bond with Sorata, who was his first male counterpart because every other friend in England was a girl. Sorata is one of a handful capable of making a Mashiro smile. Their bond, Sorata is often disappointed with Mashiro's delight with basic life, but continues to take care of it regardless. Finally, Mashiro developed a feeling for Sorata, and in a light novel he also claimed that he could not live without him. But he doesn't know how to express these feelings, and has his affection. For example, when Mashiro observes how Misaki showed Jin's affection by cooking and making lunch for him, Mashiro wanted to learn to cook for Sorata as well as closer to him. Another example was when Mashiro suddenly disappeared from the party just to find Sorata and give him the Baumkuchen cake he earned at the party, which he thought would make Sorata happy. In the final episode of anime Mashiro kisses Sorata on the cheek. In the eighth novel, Sorata confessed her own feelings for her and in their next novel officially became a couple. In the tenth novel, Mashiro breaks up with Sorata because he believes their relationship hurts them because of the fact he always compares himself to him, who hurts him and that he ignores his anger is not comparable to him, which in turn, also hurts him. After breaking up, they haven't seen each other for 4 years but Mashiro still supports Sorata's dreams like playing console games designed by Sorata as well as Sorata following Mashiro's manga tale. At the end of the tenth novel, 4 years had passed and Mashiro (who had become quite successful in his mangas) met again with Sorata (who had also been quite successful in the design of the game) where they revived their relationship with each other and promised to start a freak. At the end of rounds 10.5, one year and nine months after they reconcile their relationship, Mashiro was still busy with manga and Soratanya was still busy with developing the game. Despite this, Sorata still found time to come to Mashiro apartments and even stay long. A day Mashiro invited Sorata to meet his parents returning to Japan from England and Sorata also invited Mashiro to his hometown in Fukuoka to meet his parents. It implies that they are taking a deeper step in their relationship. Rita Ainsworth Rita and Mashiro met when Mashiro came to The Rita grandfather's atelier when he was 6. Rita eventually became jealous of Mashiro's talent and taught her how to use a computer to make manga. Rita let Mashiro move to Japan to become a manga artist, hoping Mashiro will fail and understand how he and other painters who once studied at the atelier felt. They finally reconciled when Rita came to Japan for the first time. After graduating from high school, Mashiro did not pursue his studies in college and decided to focus on his manga. He lives with Rita who is a university student in Japan in an apartment not far from the Sakurasou hostel. Nanami Aoyama Mashiro regards Nanami as a close friend as they both call each other with First. Nanami also helps take care of it, especially with issues that can be interpreted as gender-sensitive. However, Mashiro sometimes became jealous of Sorata's close friendship with Nanami, interpreting Sorata's actions as a romantic move. Then in the story, the story, Feelings for Sorata to grow, however, see as Mashiro is also a factor to consider, he set aside his own feelings for Mashiro's sake. In the tenth novel, Nanami and the residents of Sakurasou worked together to create scenarios so that Sorata and Mashiro could get back together after their 4 years broke. Misaki Kamiigusa Misaki is nicknamed Mashiro Mashiron, who likes to put n at the end of the name. Mashiro is the same Misaki in terms of painting, with the only difference that Misaki drew anime frames, while Mashiro dealt with manga. Both collaborated, and seemed to get alongside the well in episode 23, Misaki says that he fell in love with Mashiro's eyes at first glance because Mashiro saw him the same way he (Mashiro) saw someone else. Misaki said that he wanted Mashiro to be proud of him and that he looked at him/adored him. This moves Mashiro to tears. Yuuko Kanda About Mashiro and Yuko who will be near Sorata's son. In fact, Mashiro's idea of an aircraft on how to deal with Yuuko's case arose time. With plans to Be a More devastating Booking C, his separation cuts. Chihiro Sengoku Not much can be built from their relationship as cousins, because they rarely speak, and the age gap is also. Also, since Chihiro practically gives care jobs to Sorata, Mashiro's cousin doesn't really have a chance to bond with him. Ayano Iida Mashiro adheres to her editor, Ayano, with whatever last told her to do it. Mashiro often went to him to ask for help, either with his manga or even his life, as evidenced when Mashiro went to him to ask for advice on why he seemed jealous of Nanami. The Area's quote feels strange, it has been stabbing hard since that age. When you tell me not to go. When you hold me it's so tight. It won't go away. Your voice is still in my ear.
