A New York (NY) Child Custody Agreement is a legal document family law uses to ensure single, separated, and divorced parents have a comprehensive NY Co-Parenting Agreement and Parenting Schedule. Online templates, containing worksheet examples and sample forms, provide parents the legal guidance needed to create a sole, shared, or joint NY child custody arrangement plan, visitation schedule, and child support guidelines. Technology has made our lives easier in so many different ways. Why not consider a user-friendly do-it-yourself (DIY) software template that allows you to easily write a professional New York child custody agreement, without a lawyer, and then utilize that same software package to schedule, calculate, document, modify, and track any aspect of that agreement. In addition, it allows you to organize, prepare, and print any required information for parental discussions, attorney appointments, mediation meetings, court dates, etc. The benefits this software provides are numerous, and its user-friendly interface simplifies the entire process. A New York child custody agreement is commonly referred to as a co-parenting agreement or custody arrangement plan, which typically includes a custody order along with a parenting schedule. The ultimate purpose of a NY child custody agreement is to determine physical custody and legal custody. It's important to remember, the entire decision-making process needs to focus on the "Best Interests of the Children" and how both parents can best meet the needs of their children. A child's "Best Interests" is a standard that has been adopted in all areas of New York family law. It stipulates that a child or children's "Best Interests" be the central focus during any decision-making process, while abiding by all rules of law and regulations. A New York Child Custody Agreement Template Provides Guidance for Single, Separated, and Divorced Parents to Make a Comprehensive Co-Parenting Agreement Through Negotiation and Compromise. It's incredibly important for single, separated, and divorced parents to understand that negotiation and compromise need to be an integral part of completing a New York child custody agreement template. The amount of stress, complications, and time frame required to complete this process will be directly impacted by both parents willingness to negotiate and compromise. Do everything in your power to ensure that your personal conduct stays on a positive and mature path that allows both parents to come to terms with an agreement that regards the children's "Best Interests" as the most important aspect. Remember, creating your NY child custody agreement needs to be a negotiation filled with compromise by both parties, and not a battle, fight, or some type of game where you either win or lose. If you change your attitude and approach, a situation once doomed to be a very emotional and stressful experience will become a positive and productive process; where both parents ultimately understand, acknowledge, and elevate the needs of the children above their own. You are already dealing with a sensitive and emotional situation, and any negative, degrading, immature, or belligerent conduct will only make completing a New York child custody agreement template more complex, time-consuming, and stressful for both parents and the children. Motivate yourself to separate your emotional feelings from your logical decision-making mentality by elevating the needs of the children, and consenting to an agreement where your children's "Best Interests" are the top priority. A New York Child Custody Agreement Template, Containing Worksheet Examples, Sample Forms, and Calendar Scheduling, Allows Parents to Write a Physical and Legal Custody Arrangement Plan that Best Meets the Child's Needs. A successful New York child custody agreement is a legal document that addresses the child's "Best Interests", and has the support of both consenting parents. Both parents need to remember, that their ability to provide the best possible upbringing hinges on their willingness to establish and maintain a positive and flexible co-parenting relationship. A poor co-parenting relationship will have more of a negative impact on children's emotional health than most parents will ever understand, at least until it's to late. When considering a child's "Best Interests", the New York courts and parents need to consider a number of factors, which often include: A child's physical and emotional needs including medical, educational, mental, social, religious, etc. A parents desire and ability to meet the child's needs. Depending on the child's age and mental capacity, any of their preferences may be considered. The current emotional relationship that exists between each parent and the child. A parent's willingness to accept and encourage a close relationship between the other parent and child. A parents maturity and their ability to co-parent, through negotiation and compromise. Any past history of substance abuse, physical abuse, emotional abuse, and neglect. Any other factors the NY courts consider relevant to the overall health and welfare of the child. The goal of any NY child custody agreement is to ensure all aspects regarding a child's physical and emotional needs are addressed. No family situation will ever present ideal circumstances, but parents need to make the most of their broken family by ensuring their children's "Best Interests" remain the core focus. Both parents need to prioritize the needs of the children above their own, and consent to an agreement that provides their children with the best possible upbringing. Generally speaking, creating your New York child custody agreement can be broken down into two separate tasks: Parents need to determine Physical Custody. This includes developing a parenting schedule which explains how the children's time will be divided between both parents. Developing a structured and detailed custody arrangement plan and visitation schedule is an essential part of this task. In addition, a weekly scheduling chart and a yearly visitation calendar are often a required part of this process. Parents need to determine Legal Custody. Essentially, parents need to decide how decisions will be made regarding a child's education, health, social issues, etc. Parents essentially have three options, they can either share this responsibility, delegate decision-making authority to one parent, or a combination of both. All of this can easily be accomplished, without an attorney, through the use of a do-it-yourself software package which provides structured guidance and support. The software utilizes a template format, with worksheet examples and sample forms, containing guidelines, provisions, stipulations, and specific clauses. This gives parents the confidence to negotiate the terms of the agreement and represent their children's "Best Interests". In the end, parents are able to complete a comprehensive professional quality New York child custody agreement. When parents attempt to complete a NY child custody agreement by themselves, WITHOUT Any Structured Guidance or Support, it often generates a state of chaos and animosity. This not only complicates matters, but also generates overwhelming emotional stress along with uncertainty, hostility, anger, and potential lifelong resentment. Remember, the appropriate guidance and support allows you to complete a successful agreement, and minimize any problems and emotional stress so you can protect yourself and your children from their damaging effects. How to Complete a New York Child Custody Agreement Utilizing a Do-It-Yourself Software Template, Containing Worksheet Examples and Sample Forms, that Allows You to Create a Detailed Custody Schedule, Visitation Calendar, Expense Reports, and Much More. The software template in the link below, provides the structured guidance and support required to complete a successful NY child custody agreement. The benefits and tools this software provides are numerous. It not only allows you to create a professional quality agreement with a detailed custody schedule and visitation calendar, but also provides a platform to schedule, calculate, document, modify, print, and track any aspect of your agreement. Having the ability to prepare, organize, and present accurate information for any parental discussions, attorney appointments, mediation meetings, court dates, etc. has never been easier with this software package. Fortunately, the software's custody schedule and visitation calendar allow you to create a repeating or seasonal schedule, and also include any vacation time, holidays, or special events. This provides the flexibility to account for any type of scheduling event such as school days, school breaks, weekends, summers, extra-curricular activities, appointments, sick days, birthdays, etc. The software also contains a section to track "actual" parenting time vs. "scheduled" parenting time, along with a journal and expense reporting section. The importance and benefits of all the software's capabilities will not be fully understood or appreciated until after your New York child custody agreement is completed and put into effect. For instance, being able to easily document, modify, and track your agreement provides both parents with accurate information and concrete data, which helps minimize any confusion, frustration, and conflict. This allows you to avoid those frustrating and argumentative discussions composed of "He Said – She Said" or "I Remember This – The Other Parent Remembers That". Parents usually avoid modifying and tracking their NY child custody agreement, because they lack a structured format that allows for a simplified documentation process and easy access for review. This software package provides that structured and user-friendly environment to make documentation easy. The benefits don't stop there because the software allows you to compile and export all your documents for use in multiple printable reports and portable devices such as tablets and smart phones. Most importantly, it helps to avoid those frustrating, irritating, and often confrontational situations by creating a more cooperative, unified, and successful co-parenting relationship. Remember, the quality of your child's upbringing depends greatly on your ability to ESTABLISH and MAINTAIN a cooperative, unified, and successful Co-Parenting Relationship. Don't forget, it also allows you to complete your NY child custody agreement much faster by simplifying the entire process with a template layout, which provides valuable insight through worksheet examples, sample forms, guidelines, and numerous provisions. This enables you to create an ideal NY co-parenting agreement that focuses on your child's "Best Interests" while maximizing your parenting time and minimizing your expense. When considering what an attorney charges per hour, parents are able to save hundreds, even thousands of dollars, and complete the entire New York child custody agreement in the privacy of their own home without having to hire an attorney. cwwv
