The bad guys have the superpower too and want to rebuild the world to make it look the way they see it. But a prestigious school called The Hero Academy trains its students to become heroes and to help those who have less powerful peculiarities, or those who don't have them at all, and to resist the villains' plans. The series focuses on a middle school student Izuku Midoriya, who has no superpowers. Will he be able to become a hero and somehow contribute to peace and stability in the world, where the weak are the minority that needs to be defended. Watch the trailer for My Hero Academia: Two Heroes I don't know if anyone here hasn't yet seen the movie but Netflix is adding it on February 1. I was quite surprised that they actually add it. Just thought I'd make a post for them with Netflix and haven't seen it yet since checking it out on Netflix. Hope this is helpful for anyPage 2 15 comments Netflix UK subscribers processed to a packed month of anime in February, and one of the most exciting titles along the way is My Hero Academia: Two Heroes! One of the most in-demand anime, fans in the UK can finally sit back and watch the first film of the incredible My Hero Academia franchise. My Hero Academia: Two Heroes is a superhero anime feature film based on the popular manga series My Hero Academia by author Kōhei Horikoshi. The film is the first of the show's history and had relative financial success at the box office, making $27 million worldwide on a limited theatrical release. All Might, the greatest hero of the time, is invited by an old friend to visit I-Island. A technological marvel, I-Island is an artificial city that houses some of the smartest minds in the world that research quirks. With Deku with him, the young aspiring hero runs into his classmates but it's not long before they are called into action when a villain takes the entire island hostage. When will My Hero Academia: Two Heroes come to Netflix UK? Like the Studio Ghibli and Naruto films, My Hero Academia: Two Heroes will be on Netflix UK on February 1, 2020.
