Spyderco matriarch 2 self defense

Spyderco spyderco training design makes some great knives, but which is the best Spyderco knife for self-defense? As we discussed here, it's a very subjective discussion with a lot to consider. To summarize some important points, a good self-defense knife should be: Can be in your hands quickly Comfortable, enough to perform 24/7 Can be used one hand in the left / right position / tip-up / tip-down Street Legal Designed for self defense Here are our top 5 Spyderco defensive knives: Spy Knife The bestderco for Spyderco self-defense knives Spyderco self-defense knife reviews make some great EDC knives (Every Day Wear), so it's a hard job to choose the 5 we think are the best. Here are our thoughts and some more information about who we chose. Spyderco P'Kal - Spyderco P'Kal's best defensive knife has been called the Best Defensive Knife on the market today. It was designed in a collaboration with Craig Douglas (also known as South Narc). It is designed to be a Last Resort / Self Defense knife held in Pakal / Icepick fighting grip (tip down blade towards the body). Sure, if you test the design further, you can understand why it is so praised. The S30V's CPM knife curves to a evil point used to accelerate, tear and tear. Another essential feature of a good self-defense folding knife is whether you can open it with one hand. With P'Kal you can. It combines Emerson's Open Wave feature and Spyderco's patented ball bearing lock for safe and reliable deployment. It also combines Emerson's Open Wave feature and Spyderco's patented ball bearing lock for safe and reliable deployment. Gross Motor Skills Knife As you can see in the video below, using the knife is like boxing. The reason for this is that Mr Janich believes that the basic way of using knives should be to combine total motor skills (who you have access to when adrenaline floods the nervous system). If the opponent blocks, you can pull back to cut off their arm re-attacking (think Sewing Machine). Quick and effective jabs to the face, neck, and eyes can also be used to end confrontation quickly or create scope. All the while, a very sound body structure can be maintained to attack and protect from. P'Kal is also available as a coach, which if you are serious about self-defense, you should consider. A coach will allow you to practice quick and safe deployment and pressure test scenarios and techniques. Learning is all about making mistakes, and a sharp razor blade takes all the fun out there... Currently, P'Kal is available on the Spyderco website for $305. It's pretty steep for a mass-produced pocket knife. It's always have a comparative value of the price of on Amazon. Spyderco Yojimbo 2 Box Cutter from Hell! Another self-defense blade designed by Michael Janich, Syperco Yojimbo 2 can be used in both regular grip and vice versa/tape selection. It has a Wharnccliffe-style blade in a pocket knife. The weight of 4oz (heavier than the Para Military 2 is longer) helps Yojimbo deploy extremely fast. Another important point for self-defense purposes is the options Yojimbo offers you. The knife is also divided by card for all 4 pocket configurations - left/right/tip-up/tip-down. A lot of other knives don't give you the option to customize your carrying knife this way. Spyderco Yojimbo is designed for cutting, with Janich saying it possesses maximum shemage power in self-defense situations. This gives it the ability to cut through the muscles and tendons of the arms and legs. Check out the Russian guys cutting through the fabric and meat to see for themselves: The CPM 30V blade is stronger, sharper and thicker than other Spyderco models at around .140. The length of the blade is 3 and varies, so as always check with your state and local laws on the permitted implementation. Yojimbo 2's G-10 handle has received excellent reviews for speaking levels in hand. Far from self-defense purposes, it cuts power making it a great utility blade for the handyman and it is described as the Box Cutter from Hell!. Spyderco Yojimbo is also available on Amazon, and you can find prices here. Spyderco Street Beat - Pred Perrin's Fighting Knife The Street Beat is an excellent small machete, designed by renowned knife manufacturer Fred Perrin (a retired French Commando and Martial Artist) used in any combat grip. At just over 7 it's small, concealed and sheath bolatron allows it to be worn with a variety of clothing. It has a fully mourned VG10 steel blade that is 3.5 lengths long and has a sharp razor, full flat grind. This knife is extremely well balanced due to its innovative design. The smaller handle actually allows the knife to be very responsive and fit comfortably in the hand. Fred Perrin added a choil finger to the knife feeling solid in his hand. Choil and shorter handle length prevent the hand from choking on the blade when pushed at full force. The handle design is complemented by black micarta scales to really make it attractive. The Street Beat comes with a Bolatron sheaf with G Clip tie. The knife fits and is very safe. I rarely hear of any rattling from the knife. There are 2 adjustable screws that allow you to carry the knife the way you want. Vertically, inverted, horizontally, in the forward cant and irreversibly is all good. From a defensive perspective, it can ride through or under a shirt and is accessible with one hand. This is necessary so it is in your hands quickly when you really need it. There are a few review videos on Youtube Like this: Fred Perrin is more than a knife manufacturer custom knife that will keep its value well. Looking around the web, people seemed quite pleased they were spending more money on such a great knife. On the spyderco knife website listed at $279.95. You can compare this with the price on Amazon here. Spyderco Matriarch - Beginner's Choice? Spyderco Matriarch is a great defensive knife, especially for someone who has not received any knife training. It is a scaled-down version of the popular Spyderco Civil and as you can see, there is a evil S-shaped blade. This knife is not designed to stab and push forward. It is designed to cut down, hooking and pulling. Matriarch's head can dig deep and tear apart the attacker's body like claws. These are the kind of defensive motions you will need to resist a knife attack. Most beginners with blades are more likely to cut than stab. More fatal stabbings but: a: You can be charged with murder. Stabbing victims were known to fight for several minutes before succumbing to their wounds. An effective cut can cut off important muscles and tendons of the arm (known as defanging snakes in Filipino martial arts) and at the very least, give an attacker a little less arm to use. You may see some potential apps in this youtube video at a time of 18 Minutes. An essential feature of a self-defense knife is that it can be in your hands quickly. Spyderco Matriarch comes with the Emerson Wave feature so it might be good to go in less than a second. As you would expect from a Spyderco knife, it is very well built. Blade 3.55 is from VG-10 Stainless Steel, it has a sturdy rear lock mechanism and can be cut off for left/right/tip-up/tip-down carry.' The only downside of Matriarch is that it looks scary! It is targeted in the direction of self-defense so its use as a utility knife is limited. You can find the latest prices for Matriarch Spyderco here. Spyderco Reverse - Double your fun! Spyderco Reverse was designed in 2015. The design was a collaboration between Michael Janich and Craig Douglas (also known as South Narc). South Narc worked in the army and undercover for many years; so bring a lot of practical experience to the table. It's a dedicated knife for self-defense, designed for use in ice-pick/reverse-grip. This grip is popular because it combines Gross Motor Skills, not Fine Motor Skills (also known as Fancy). Tremendous force can be transferred to the top of the blade. As the name titled, you can redirect the handle to suit your personal preferences. The knife comes with its own flagpole, which allows to easily remove and re-mount the scales. South Narc likes P'Kal style while Janich Edge Out. If you don't know what's right for you you Reverse will allow you to experiment and learn. There is a great article that discusses grips here. The knife has 3.47, CBTS BD1 Stainless Steel Blade and G10 Handle. With a total length of just under 8 it is light and concealed. Like Street Beat, the knife comes with a Boltaron tape with the G-10 clip. It will be in your hands quickly, and you also don't need to worry about dealing with an open mechanism. Here's a video review of Spyderco Reverse: You can find current prices and more Spyderco Reverse reviews here. So yes we have it. Is spyderco knife best for self-defense on our list? Or do you consider a Spyderco knife to be worthy of inclusion? Hit the comments section and let us know! Be sure to check out our pages on 10 of the best self-defense knives and The Best Knife Fighting Style as many Spyderco knives pop up there. This post was originally published on October 14, 2016 and updated on June 28, 2019, to include more current knives. Using knives for self-defense is a bad idea. Let me get out of the way. By writing this post, I get into pretty controversial territory. Many, both trained and amateur, insist that a knife should never be used for self-defense unless you have undergone intensive training. Even so, you may want to avoid whipping out a knife at all costs. A knife is messy and requires you to get extremely close to your invaders, make you more vulnerable and give them the ability to take your weapons away. Knife defenses can be fatal to your invaders, leaving you with potential jail time and a traumatic experience that haunts your dreams. On top of that, folding knives often don't make the best defense tools anyway because they are prone to breakage and require more focus for participation. But all this does not prevent companies from producing knives in self-defense. Any knife can be imagined to be used in self-defense. As long as it's sharp, you can do some damage, but they are created with a purpose in mind. Sure, you may be able to use a few of these to open packages, but this is not something you want to make for everyday use. So with all the disclaimers along the way and with the knowledge that knife self-defense may not always be the best idea unless you are in a catastrophic situation with your life on the line (of if you are attacked by a rabid) , these are 10 folding knives specifically designed for self-defense. 1. Cold Steel Ti-Lite 6 Let's start everything with the first cold steel knife on this list: Cold Steel Ti-Lite. The Ti-Lite is a throwback design that's meant to look like the popular knives in the 1950s. The knife has a spear-point long blade profile that is optimal for piercing. there are a few sizes, but the size that we are talking about here is Ti-Lite 6, there is a Tongue. At this size, the knife is not good for many others except self-defense. It may even be too big. However, the Ti-Lite has a large feature seen in many of these knives - the ability to open in a quick movement out of the bag. The quillon can snag the bag as it is being pulled out before the blade is locked in place. This knife can be out and ready to threaten in a moment's notice. 2. Fox Folding Karambit Next on this list is Fox Folding Karambit. The truth is that all karambits can be on this list because karambits are ancient defense tools. They are not the most useful tool for things other than self-defense. However, this has a few tricks up its sleeve. The Fox Folding Karambit has a 3.14-inch blade with a textured G-10 handle scale. It has a padded mechanism that keeps the blade engaged and the knife has a gentle appearance thanks to its black tongue coating. The karambit design consists of traditional rings, allowing different types of grip. 3. Emerson CQC-7 Kershaw Emerson CQC-8K Ernest Emerson is one of the fathers of tactical knives and just about every knife he does is designed to fight. If you only have to choose an Emerson to carry in self-defense, turn it into CQC-7. CQC stands for close-quarters combat, and that's where this knife excels. The knife boasts a modified tanto point that is great for cuts and piercing. The black G-10 handle scale provides a safe grip and the model has been updated to include the Emerson Wave feature. That means you can open it in a quick motion. You find that kind of function on many knives these days (such as Ti-Lite above), but Wave is the first and is said to be the best. According to Emerson, the CQC-7 has become the most sought after folding knife of all time. Luckily for you, Emerson teamed up with Kershaw to bring a more reasonable version of the knife. But if you're really going to defend yourself, The Kershaw Emerson CQC-8K is an even bigger version. It's just as good. 4. Talon II cold steel is famous for making special knives made for self-defense. In an earlier version of this post, Cold Steel Hold Out I was on this list, but that was discontinued unfortunately. However, Black Talon II replaced it, and it did not make its way in the ferocious division. Black Talon II has a 4 inch long hawk blade with Tri-Ad lock and an open disc that allows to participate in a quick motion. This knife is based on a design that was featured later on this list, but this knife is cheaper and some say more durable. 5. Spyderco P'Kal However, another knife designed by a person with a background in self-defense and martial arts is Spyderco P'Kal. Michael Janich has been teaching and studying self-defense and all its sides for over 35 years. He used that knowledge to a few knives for Spyderco, including P'Kal. The name is taken from the term pakal, which is an icepick grip that is comfortable and easy to use. It has a 3.19 inch blade made from S30V stainless steel and uses a ball bearing lock to open. Black G-10 handle scales make it easy to grip, even if your palms are sweaty. The knife also combines an Emerson Wave feature with a twist. It's like a metal bar and can be removed if you don't want it. Overall, this is called one of the best self-defense directories on the market. You can get a P'Kal coach to get in some practice so you can get in some reps. 6. Cold Steel Voyager Vaquero XL If you have poor bladder control, you may want to avoid cold steel Voyager Vaquero XL because it tends to make people wet themselves when they see this beast. This giant knife boasts a curved 5.5-inch blade made from Carpenter BD1 alloy with a stonewashed finish. Its threat factor is out of the chart. This is not the kind of knife you take out to peel some apples on the porch or cut a piece of twine out in public. It is made to slash and stab and destroy overall, which is why this knife makes this list. Cold Steel said knives in the Voyager series are often used among law enforcement officers. 7. Benchmade Bedlam Benchmade only to make this list is Bedlam. It is cleverly named because when there is total bedlam, this is the knife you want around. This knife has design signals from scimitar, a short curved sword made to slash enemies. They are often used by security forces for kings. Benchmade took that sentiment and injected it into the wicked Bedlam. It has a curved 4-inch blade made from 154CM stainless steel with a prominent swedge to increase piercing capacity. You can pick it up in a part serrated edge or a fair edge. This version is also an automatic knife for quick and easy access. Ergo on the G-10 handle scales are striking and natural. The best part is that it uses Benchmade's reliable AXIS locking mechanism. 8. Mantis Snaggletooth While many of the knives on this list get some bonus points for their meninges, Mantis Snaggletooth looks pretty goofy. That doesn't mean it can't protect you from an attack. Snaggletooth was designed by Morgan Thomas with some inspiration from self-defense instructor Bram Frank. This knife is actually a fighting knife, despite its strange look. The great thing about this knife is that you can use it to disarm an aggressor without opening the blade. Using Bramp (the protrusion designed by Bram Frank), you can take down the invaders and even open the knife on their skin if things escalate. It even has a finger ring loaded with springs to turn it a karambit at the notification of a second. With a 2.75-inch blade, it's smaller most of the knives are on this list, but it will complete the job with some proper training. 9. Spyderco Civil These last two knives are similar but are often substance as the best self-defense knives for anyone. In the 90s, a law enforcement branch contacted Spyderco to create a weapon of last-minute remedies for its undercover agents, who may not have received much training. The result is civilians. It has a 4,125-inch blade with an inverted S-shape that acts as a type of claw. A full SpyderEdge blade does no maximum damage. Although the head is quite vulnerable, it does not really matter in extreme self-defense situations. If you have to whip this out for your safety, the most likely is that you won't care about the knife. This knife is highly specialized and has a limited number. 10. Spyderco Matriarch 2 Then, of course, there is the very popular matriarch 2. When you ask people about the best self-defense knife on the market, almost everyone will point to this knife. It took many design signals from civilians but with a few important changes. The first is a blade smaller than 3.5 inches. This shorter blade makes the head less broken. It retains the same cruel spiderEdge. This version of matriarch 2 features the Emerson Wave, which means you can open this knife easily and quickly in intense situations. On top of that, the two-way structure FRN handle gives a reliable grip and a lighter weight. When things get dangerous and you need a knife of last policy, you will not regret reaching out to Matriarch 2.
