Lighting Castle featured in : The old fixture sees the light Thomas Allie has bought, repaired and sold light fixtures at the Lighting Palace for three years, first at the Old Folsom and now at 57th Street Antique Row in eastern Sacramento. People take you lights, and their dogs have chewed ropes, and they don't know how to reunite the lights themselves, and they don't want to get electroxies, says Allie. We rewire and repair the lights. It's a bit of a lost art form. Allie told me that he obtained his repair skills and business for 19 years he worked at Lamps Plus. He opened the Lamp Palace with an area of 400 square feet and grew to 2,000 square feet a year ago. He took some fixtures on the consignment, but he bought most of them in lice markets and antique shows. His shop, Suite G at 855 St., is full of chandeliers, floor lamps and more.
