It is operated by Richland County School District 2, USA. Opened in the fall of 1970, it was run for a long time when the only high school operating in District 2 of the Richland School District replaced Dentsville High School. The history school had an unusual design. The main building was divided into octagonal pods, each containing eight Chevron-shaped classrooms. The design comes from an open classroom concept that was prevalent in the late 1960s and early 1970s. At the beginning of the school, there were no walls in the classrooms within each pod, so students could participate in one of several classes that occurred at once. This was not successful, and the walls were later added in the early 1980s to separate classroom pods. In 2008, a new three-story building replaced Ford with a new building, incorporating the original gymnasium and art building as the only remaining buildings on the original campus. On October 26, 2015, a Richland County sheriff's deputy serving as a school resource officer in Spring Valley was called to the classroom to remove the schoolgirl from the classroom. A schoolgirl has been arrested on suspicion of being a school where she was uneasy about giving up her mobile phone and refusing to leave the room. [2] She was then pulled from the desk by officers, thrown to the floor and handcuffed. Another schoolgirl in the classroom was also accused of interfering with the school after yelling and cursing at a police officer. [2] The officer was fired after an internal review found he had acted against sheriff's department policy. [3] The FBI and U.S. Department of Justice are investigating to determine whether agents violated the student's civil rights. [4] [5] In response to the incident, a South Carolina lawmaker, led by Councilwoman Maria MacLeod, has suggested restrictions on state statutes that allow teachers to define when students can be ejected out of schools. [6] The district administrators also promised to do so.
