I went to buy some groceries and ate good Indian food. The staff is not friendly at all times. First the table is not clean and tidy at all. My desk had oil and food stains all over and no one cleaned it. It took about the next 10 minutes to place my order when there were only 3-4 tables occupied. I asked for water at the beginning of my dinner and after some constant requests water was served just before paying my bill. I expect more friendly behavior from the new Indian bazaar staff. The food was fine. I wouldn't say it's indian food authentication but street food. I would defiantly prefer to go to another restaurant for the next time as it saves me time and money. 8 Reviews of 8 reviews with an average rating of 4.0 stars have been consolidated here. Try the popular samosa chaat, a dish similar to a savory exotic pie, for a light snack or appetizer, and then turn to star vegetarian offerings such as spinach-based palak paneer or muttering anloo made from potatoes and peas in cream sauce. Choose your dish as a thali dinner, and get a large TV tray filled with other Indian delights to eat as often as it's wallet-friendly. Load More See All Articles I don't usually review bad experiences unless I have them at least twice. But this place beats everything. The owner is really rude when answering questions. I know that there are certain parts if India's tone is normal. However, when I pay using my credit... The card he told me This is a good credit card. They pay you back for each transaction. How much money will you get back from them? It's as if you don't have $5 in your wallet. These are the right words. Accusing someone of fraud simply by using a credit card shows only the lower courtesy and etiquette of the owner. I would advise you to stay away from the place, unless it's really an emergency. More emergencies. More
