Rate My Professors allows you to rate your professor and campus. Read student evaluations and reviews from other students. Download Rate My Professors on PC. FREE / Rate My Professors / Chrome Extension / Version 1.0Getting a college education is one of the most expensive if not advantageous investments in life. With all the universities and colleges out there not to mention the number of professors available, deciding which course to take and which institution to take it is already a pain of its own. After all, education is a fundamental commodity in life that proves useful in the long run. That said, making sure you get the most out of your investment is just normal. It pays to know whether or not; you get the most out of the tuition you pay for the services provided by the professors. This is where the Rate My Professors app comes into play. As simple as it may sound, this modest app will help you get an idea of which professor can give you the basic skills needed for your chosen course or degree. Sharing and reading important information on classRate My Professors is a simple review site that, as the name suggests, focuses on the performance of college professors. Ratemyprofessors.com is a site founded in May 1999 by a Menlo Park, CA-based software engineer named John Swapceinski. Rate my professors to allow college and university students to post or assign grades to campuses and professors of American, British and Canadian institutions. Rate My Professors was originally launched TeacherRatings.com until 2001 when the developer decided to rename the site. Four years after the rebranding, Patrick Nagle and William DeSanti then acquired Rate My Professors in 2005. The couple then sold the site to Viacom's MTVU, MTV's College channel in 2007. Since then, Rate my Professors has evolved to become the largest professor rating site on the planet. With over 1.7 million professor reviews in over 7,500 campuses in the United States, The United Kingdom and Canada. This increase in popularity catapulted the site to become the busiest place for gradprofessors, colleges and universities. One of the biggest benefits of this app is that freshmen students can view the performance of the professors on their campuses. Thus, aiding them in their decisions or for the most part, prepare for what's waiting for the professor, college, or campus enrolled in. In other words, if you are a college freshman student who is researching or in search of the best professor who can give you the best teaching about your course, then, feel free to check out the Rate My Professors app today. See the difference and contribute your to help other students in the future. So what is is waiting for? Click the download button on your screen and take advantage of this free app today. Find your professor or SchoolRate My Professors app is built for college students to help them choose the best courses and professors in the US, UK and Canada. The goal of the app is simple; provide a credible platform students can use to gain basic knowledge of the courses offered and the professors of colleges or universities in their field. Rate my professors app, for the most part, is best for college freshmen who are looking for different opinions about colleges and universities. After all, it is best to have basic knowledge of where to invest especially in a commodity as expensive as a college education. Rate my Professors app houses millions of reviews from students from more than 7,000 institutions or campuses in the United States, The United Kingdom and Canada. Some of these institutions include TCC Tidewater Community College, ASU Arizona State University, HCC Houston Community College, MDC Miami Dade College, UCF University of Central Florida, BYU Brigham Young University, etc. As for how accurate the reviews are depending on the volume itself, after all, not everyone will be satisfied with a particular campus or the teaching methods used by professors. It is important to remember that you are making one of the most important investments in your life. Also, just like other investors, you need to do your research as well. All resources or data is already provided by the Rate My Professors app, this means that all you need, is to do your part, which is to leverage the platform. Like most applications, the Rate my Professors app comes with its own set of guidelines. These guidelines will help you feed the app with the most accurate evaluation of the university, professor or college you chose. Take note that following these guidelines is introduced to help you produce a meaningful review that will be helpful for future students in the future. That said, check out some of the Rate my Professors guidelines below for more information. Be honest in your reviews. You want to be able to trust these reviews when evaluating your course options so we ask to contribute in the same spirit. When reviewing a class and/or professor, it is often good to provide both pros and cons. This leads to much more credible and constructive feedback for your peers. Reviews should focus specifically on the course and your learning experience. Do not comment on a professor's appearance, dress, age, gender or race. Avoid hearsay. We want you to share your individual experience and what you removed from the course. Do not speak on behalf of another, encourage others to submit their reviews. This is not a forum for debate. Reviews that specifically refer to another will be removed. If you don't agree with someone's individual experience, we are you to share your own. We understand that not all teachers are the perfect match for every learning style. Tell us how the course or professor wasn't the best thing for you in a way that helps others make their own decision. Reviews driven by anger do not reflect well on the author and can be removed for violations such as profanity. Take a minute to take a step back and make sure your review will really help others understand your experience. Rate Mina professors reserve the right to remove grades that do not contain material comments. We only allow one student to review a professor once per course. Spamming or dogpiling an account will result in comment removal and the account is temporarily locked on the site. When you read your fellow students' reviews, we encourage you to use your discretion and weigh each review among the others. Online reviews should be one of the many resources used when making a decision that affects your academic future. This is an anonymous website where students can share their classroom experiences. We cannot provide any information or personal data about the person who submitted an audit. We don't proactively add any professor, course, or our student community into campus to our website, every profile. We can't delete a comment just because it's negative. It will only be removed if it does not comply with our website guidelines. We encourage you to engage with students on the site by creating a Rate My Professors account. With a Professor account, you can post a response and be noticed when new grades are posted on your profile. To create your professor's account, get started here. Responses driven by anger do not reflect well on the author and can be removed for violations such as profanity. Take a minute to take a step back and make sure your response will really help others. Rate My Professors moderation team is unable to prove or disprove the details mentioned in a review. We're not judges of facts. If you do not agree with the details mentioned in a review, see the paragraph above regarding the management of your profile. If you think your profile is spammed or dogpiled, please tell us. You can contact us here or support@ratemyprofessors.com. We are here to help and will be happy to review the comments in question. While it is against our guidelines for a professor to rate themselves, we recommend for professors to encourage their students to give grades each semester. The more reviews you have, the more representative they will be. Professor's response is subject to the same restrictions regarding prohibited content, as stated above. Rate My Professors app is a user-friendly review platform new and upcoming students can use to the right campus, course and professor for his/her higher education.
