While some may mourn the loss of our daily lives, online-based movie-watching eliminates problems with lost or damaged fragile discs and makes movies available on a variety of platforms so you can watch movies you own anywhere, anytime, without having to remember your DVD grab. Of course illegal downloading and streaming is very popular, but it's private the many people who worked to make a movie of the compensation they deserve for their blood, sweat and water. Plus the available options can often be low-quality and you run the risk of infecting your computer or mobile device with a virus if you don't know what you're doing. One of the most popular methods is using an online streaming service such as Netflix, Hulu Plus, or Amazon's First Instant Video. These services charge either a monthly or yearly fee and give you access to tons of content, though there's always the chance that a specific movie you're looking for won't be on whatever streaming services you have. These content services have access to is still changing as they make new deals, so you don't stick with the same options months after month. These aforementioned services are also great for television-watching and have started doing their own original show to compete on the television market. Krak is a website that offers movies and TV shows to tide for free, but it is ad-sponsored and you'll end up seeing on numerous commercials as you would watch the programming on cable. The amount of content Crackle also offers is climber piking than the subscription services, as the site doesn't have the financial pain to make content giant purchases like these bigger sites, so it might be harder to find your favorite movie. The disadvantage of an online streaming service is you are at the mercy of the content company there is available to offer; you can't just choose any movie under the sun and be guaranteed to be able to watch it. You also don't own the films, so if Netflix gets rid of your favorite movie you'll find yourself able to watch it.downloading a way to own movies and watch online is to download them. If you're a Google or Apple fan, both iTunes and the Google Play store offer movies to buy from those accounts that come for you to own. New release cost around $20; about the price even a DVD would cost, even if a digital copy can't be lost or damaged. Of course, buying individual titles they own is more expensive than paying the small fee for a streaming service and getting access to oodles of content. Both iTunes and Google Play also offer movies to rent for a lower price. Renting gives you the chance to watch the movie once in a 30-day period and 24 hours to finish it after you click Play. These options are also great for switching between devices, as iTunes and Google Play will remember where you are in a movie if you're off and want to switch from your TV to your tablet or smartphone. Amazon offers movies to buy or rent at similar price points as Apple and Google, and you don't need a Prime member to access this service.
