Setelah membuat jalan Japan and topped the box office last year, the efforts of My Hero Academia's second feature film, Heroes Rising, will soon make its big debut in the West thanks to Funimation. This is especially interesting considering that not only will the original Japanese version of the film be screened with English subtitles, but the film will debut a new English dub as well. With its big premiere in just a few days, Funimation has revealed a new addition to the cast for the new film! Along with confirmation of a new English voice actor behind pro hero Hawks (who will soon appear in the anime series), Funimation also confirmed the actors behind two new key characters appearing in the film. Dani Chambers will voice the young Mahoro, while Maxey Whitehead will voice Katsuma.Both boys play roles in the new arrangement, which sends Class 1-A to an island for new training, and these kids end up wrapped up in a hot battle movie. But more fans will be able to see how it unfolds for themselves as Funimation will screen My Hero Academia: Heroes Rising in select theaters across the United States and Canada on February 26. We are now announcing voice actors for new characters in the upcoming film!! Dani Chambers will voice this little troublemaker in a voiceover. So cute!#HeroesRisingMovie pic.twitter.com/2W0iW4hZJy - Funimation (@FUNimation) February 14, 2020 Directed by Kenji Nagasaki, who has directed the first four anime and film seasons, the film also features a new character design from Yoshihiko Umakoshi, with Yosuke Kuroda providing the script, Yuki Hayashi composing the music for the new film, and series creator Kohei Horikoshi contributing a new character design. As with the first film, Two Heroes, Horikoshi also acted as a creative supervisor.0comments This film is currently described as like, A story that must be viewed passionately!! In the film, Deku, Bakugo, Ochaco, Todoroki, and all the other Class 1-A members will perform! Although All Might was admired by [many] around the world, it was with a sad heart that he had to give up his hero's role as a Symbol of Peace. Therefore, a dark force moving behind the scenes, a villain named Nune who could be considered the biggest villain by far. Are you excited to see My Hero Academia: Heroes Rising?
