Bar rail molding dimensions

89/100 available in four types of wood stock in 4, 6 and 8 feet length of Chicago Bar Arm Rail Molding: If you choose to use Oak Bar Rail, also known as Chicago Style Arm Rail, you'll find it' the most expensive part of your project, right behind the bar stool. Arm Rail Molding usually takes in the range of $15 to $30 per foot. Yes, it is an expensive item, but the wooden fence lasts forever, looks great and is worth the investment. Once you've completed your bar project, you can start saving money over local pub rates and only that will help you pay for both your bar stools and hand rail shaping at any time. Save money using cheaper types of wood: Chicago style hand rail molding is typically sold in 4, 6 and 8 foot sections in a variety of premium types, including Red Oak, Hard Maple, Cherry. To save money, choose a cheaper Ash or Poplar. The ash & poplar species can be painted in oak or walnut finish and will not have a strong grain pattern. Poplar is a great choice for a flat painted hand fence. See the suggested hand sculpting sections in our Bar store and below. For large jobs or project material quotes feel free to contact us. Buy it or build it? Cost to buy vs. build it yourself. If your budget allows, you can buy hand rail molding online or from a local supplier. But if you're on a budget, you have options, one is to produce your own bar hand rail using our forum based EMBP-06 DIY Cove Cut Arm Rail Guide. Another option is just to build a simple hand fence as seen on our EHP-01 and EHP-02 plan sets. It consists of two 1x 6 plates connected to a lap joint, and then rounded with a router. In addition, you can also build a padded arm rail using our embp-05 padded hand guide forum. See all the bar options below. We regularly monitor material prices, and the current hand-down winner for the lowest price on chicago's hand rail goes to Home Depot and their House of Fara bar rail slat line.
