Players can learn some basics of operating servers that are useful even for school class kids. You can also learn how to create a website and promote a server, how to interact with other people, such as clients. If enough people play to play on the server, running it can be beneficial as well. However, there is nothing easy about any of this. Don't worry, the toolbox simulation team administrator is always here to help with some of the items found on the server and in the minecraft world itself. Because the admin command bar mod is not yet supported, it has only two commands. However, they are both very useful really. The /pregen command requires that the user fill in some data for sizes, and then it will generate a defined part of the world, no need for anyone to be around. There is also the /purgechunks command to unload pieces when there is no one nearby. Users always have access to /setspawn and /pregenspawn, although these commands are often under one name or another. What about the future of this fashion? In case more modders create their own commands and scripts in order to start stepping in to support this, the Admin Toolbox commands can become one of these super useful mods, the kind of thing everyone loads at least once. It's useful at the moment, but it doesn't really do anything you couldn't get from a few other fashions. Hardly some of these other mods, the administrator command toolkiary works with Minecraft 1.7.10. This means you can use this mod without changing the version you're using, or with backtrat with just one or two updates.
