Blue thunder band

The Blue Thunder made 32 parts of the drum for the Seattle Seahawks, the team in the National Football Conference national football league. The Blue Thunder made their debut in 2004, the first year in which Seahawks Stadium was renamed Qwest Field, now known as Lumen Field. [1] Blue Thunder consists of 30 pieces: 8 snares, 8 bass drums, 6 Tenor drums and 8 Cymbal players. They can be seen performing around the stadium and in local fan bars two hours before and after each home game, as well as on their stage 12. Man Flag during TV timeouts. As well as during the larger Seattle/Washington area promoting and playing music for the Seahawks. Along with performing at home games, Blue Thunder also participates in more than 100 various events throughout the year, including parades, corporate events, fundraising and local festivals. [2] Many star drummers joined the band for individual plays, including Alan White, Will Calhoun, David Garibaldi, Byron McMackin, Mike DeRosier, Steve Smith, Jason McGerr and Jurassic Riley.
