Studio city theatre 12136 ventura blvd

13 people preferred this theater The Studio City Theatre was opened June 18, 1938 with Charles Boyer in Mayerling and Gordon Oliver in The Marines Are Here. He was to open with Clark Gable in Test Pilot and Mickey Rooney in Judge Hardy's Children. It was an independent theatre that, even before it opened, was involved in an anti-trust lawsuit with Fox West Coast Theatres over the availability of the films. It was soon taken over by fox West Coast Theatres. It was closed in February 1991. is still there, but his days as a working-class neighborhood movie house are gone. Currently, a bookstore is housed in the building. Fortunately, the old ticket office lives on (to advertise books) and enough of the original façade and the marquee remains to remind visitors what was once here. The original terrazo remains the reception of customers at the store. Studio City Theatre shares the same fate as the La Reina Theatre down the road on Ventura Boulevard. Both are now retail stores.
