Hackett shorts size guide

Gentlemen, I recently bought a pair of Hackett's wide shaft (jumbo) cords from Ebay, advertised as a size 31, which would be me around (oscillating between 31 and 32). When they arrived, they were too tight, and the label said 36/52. Now my question is not whether the Ebay seller made a mistake or misadvertised pants, but just what those numbers stand for. The Hackett site is not terribly useful; their chart size lists 36 pants as the equivalent of L, which I don't think might be correct. (These pants are not too tight, they are impossible to close tightly.) Is there something obvious going on here that I'm too stupid to understand? Thanks in advance, Teekayvee Hackett's casual trousers in Italian fabric have a denser shape. I wear 34 shaves, I can wear 32, but prefer more comfort; However, with this particular range I need to wear 36. I have 32 schnur and moleskin jeans (not to mention Italian fabric) from Hackett, purchased in 2005. They had a tougher fit; however, they are not as tight as the current Hackett range. In your case, it seems that it says it is the wrong size - may be rejecting clothes because of the wrong size of the information. Another question about hackett's size. 1. On eBay Hackett size and MHS/Gives-Hawkes measurements are different. It seems that Marks and Spencer and Gieves and Hawkes measurements tend to be similar, and Hackett has smaller measurements on his chest. Is Hackett a slimmer slinky look at the same breast size, or should you wear a Hackett jacket one size larger than a normal British suit? 2. I always wear M (100) on my T-shirts, jackets and coats. But the costume size of the system is a little different from the random size of the system, so I'm worried about that. Buying items on overseas without wearing is usually not what I'm called for, but I don't have other options. I can wear a 38R suit and a 40R zara suit/ coat M. Should I go Hackett suit 38R, or 40R should be better? (Sorry for the lack of information. I think if you were to take some tailor tape and measure the pants you could find if they were mis-advertised by the seller. Many items on Ebay were either altered or, as mentioned, a factory defect that prevented its sale. So what I would like to measure is, and if it measures 29 you would be better off with the seller than just relying on 36/52 on the tag.
