Yes, you should include Dean's list on your resume in two specific circumstances. 1. You were on Dean's list always put Dean's list on your resume if you did the list regularly. Make Dean's list for many semesters throughout your college career demonstrating a strong, consistent work ethic, as well as academic ability. If, on the other hand, you only made the list a couple of times, you should not include it on your resume. While making Dean's list is an accomplishment, including it when you only do the list once or twice to make you appear inconsistent. 2. You went to or graduated from a university's more prestanged university, the more seriously the university you should consider putting Dean's list on your resume. This applies if you go to (help) one of the Ivy League universities (e.g. Yale, Harvard and Princeton), or any of the colleges and universities widely recognized as the best in the United States. Knowing that you've made Laan's list of such a competitive institution will impress employees even more, and help the name of your university stand out. Even if you only made Dean's list once or twice, consider adding it to your resume if you went to a prestanged university like any of the above. How to place Dean's list on your resume if you decide to put Dean's list on your resume, make sure to do it the right way using the proper format. Place the Dean list under your education section, you should always list the Dean in your Resume Education section, because it's part of your education history. This is also where employees expect to see it. Put Dean's list next to the GPA on your resume. This line must be under the name, city, and state of your university, as well as your degree title and graduation year. Here's a model you can use for your own resume: University Education or College Name – City, State Degree Title (including Minor) Graduation Year GPA, Dean's List for [X] semester notices how often you've made Dean's Army list you've listed Dean, the more impressive it is to an employer because it reflects consistent excellence. If you've made the list multiple Dean times, include the number in your education section. However, if you have made the list less than three times, leave it there. Only graduates from above schools should mention they've made the list once or twice. List the number right after you mention Dean's Education list in your education section, as in this example: Examples of Dean's List on a Summary Here are some examples of how to properly add Dean's list to your resume: Dean's List is an remarkable academic honor that you at the university level.
