See examples of your ballots for future elections. Find your polling place, and view your voting history. You must provide voter information to view sample ballots. There are hundreds of voting styles throughout North Carolina for each election, and different voters vote at different contests based on where they live. Here's how to see an example of your ballot: Go to the Electoral State Council's Voter Search page. Enter the required fields, including Your First Name, Last Name, and Voter Status. Click Search. The system will display a list of suitable voter names and the districts and cities where the voters are registered. Click a name from the list that matches you. The system will display your voter information, including your police station, congressional district, NC Senate district, NC House district, district commissioner district, etc. Click the blue ribbon labeled Sample Voice mail. Under Elections you will see the name of the current/next election. On the right of that, under Ballots, you will see a link to a sample ballot for the police station where you live if the election is postponed or underway and a sample of ballot papers has been set. If a link to the sample voice mail appears, click the link to view the voice mail as a PDF, which you can download and print if desired. Click the blue ribbon labeled Election Polling Place, and you'll see the address you chose. NOTE: The year of birth is not required. If the system doesn't accept the year of your birth, try entering only Your First Name, Last Name, and Voter Status. That's the only field that's needed. If you have any problems, please contact the State Board of Elections at elections.sboe@ncsbe.gov or call (919) 814-0700 during normal business hours. What's included? A single data entry is included for each election in which voters participated in the last 10 years. Voter registration number, NCID, party affiliation, and police stations, as well as voting methods (e.g., directly on Election Day, absent by mail) are included. See the file layout for a complete list of variables. What's not included? Voter names and demographics are not included. However, however, can be linked (via NCID or county and voter registration numbers) to the Voter Registration Data file, which contains the voter's name and demographics. When are files updated? Files are updated weekly on Saturday morning. After each election, it may take several weeks for all 100 counties to complete their voter history. The history_stats contains the number of group-level voters participating in a particular election. What's included? You can see the number of North Carolina voters participating in a particular election, broken down by county, police station, voting method, and voter demographics: party affiliation, race, ethnicity, gender, and age. For primary elections, party votes (that is, the main party in which voters participate) are also included. See the layout file for a complete list of variables. What's not included? Individual voter level data is not included. Candidate/ballot item selections are not included. Election results are not included. When are files updated? A file is generated for each selection. After the election, it may take several weeks for all 100 counties to complete their voter history. Select a tool from our Selector Tools platform, or find their respective links and descriptions below. Note: Under state law, voter absentee ballot request information is confidential, not public records until ballots are returned or until Election Day. Therefore, voice mail request information will not appear in your voter records through the Voter Search Tool, as has happened in the past. Voter Form Download the North Carolina voter form, or find more information. Access your voter records by entering your information into Voter Search, our most popular voter tool. Find out the answers to frequently asked questions and learn how to navigate each part of your voter profile. For additional information, visit our press release, How to Know Your Vote Counted in North Carolina. Question: I voted early in person. Why is something displayed under Your Absentee Ballot? Answer: Don't worry. In North Carolina, when you vote early on a one-stop site, you vote absentee ballots. According to law in North Carolina, early voting is considered absent in person, when you vote absent from Election Day. A few weeks after the election, your county electoral council will assign this vote to your Voter History. Question: I voted on Election Day. Why doesn't it appear in my Voter History? Answer: Your vote is counted as soon as you put your ballot in the tabulator on Election Day. Before information about voter participation appeared online, the board your area must upload information about all voters participating in the election before assigning it to your Voter History. This may take up to a few weeks after Election Day. For more on post-election post-election post-election procedures and audits. Question: When will my Voter History be updated to reflect my 2020 vote? Answer: Exactly when your vote will appear in Voter History will vary by district and depending on when each district completes its voter history record. This could take several weeks. If your voter history doesn't reflect this year's vote, that doesn't mean it doesn't count. When you insert a ballot into a tabulator on Election Day, your selection is added to the result. Read on for details of all six sections in your voter profile, such as those accessed in the Voter Search tool. 1) Sample Ballots: The Sample Ballot Section will contain examples of your ballot papers for future elections. If there is a primary election, you will see ballot papers from your registered party. If you are unaffiliated, you will see every instance of ballot papers for each party that has an open primer. For elections, you'll find a sample of ballot papers for future elections. 2) Election Day Polling Stations: Election Day Polling Stations will show your polling place for the upcoming elections. On Election Day, this is where you go to vote. If you click on the site name, you'll find more information about the polling place. This includes the address of the polling station and sample ballot papers for the site, as well as the address, hours, and contact information for your local electoral council. 3) Voter Details: The Voter Details section will show the following information: Registered District, Registration Status, Voter Registration Number, NCID, Registered Party, Race, Ethnicity, Gender, Registration Date, and NCDMV Customer status. The details should match what you submit in your voter registration application. 4) Jurisdiction: The Jurisdiction section will indicate which district you live in and which contests are eligible for your vote. These include congressional districts, NC Senate and House districts, Superior Court districts, Judicial districts, District Attorney's Districts, District Commissioner districts, City Council districts, Municipalities, Wards, and School Board districts. 5) Voter History: Voter History will show the county and voting methods for each election in North Carolina. This section has four columns: Elections, Voting Methods, Elected Districts, and Voting Parties. The election indicates which election you are participating in. Selected Methods shows you how you selected. LIVE: You vote directly on Election Day. ABS-1STOP: You voted directly during the early voting. You voted by absentee by mail. You chose temporary. Voted County shows you the county you voted for. The Elected Party shows whichever primary you choose during the primary election. It has nothing to do with who you choose. That information is confidential. 6) Your Absentee Ballot: If you vote by mail or in person during the initial start period, your ballots will appear in this section. This section shows Election Date, County, AbsentEe Status, Return Date, Return Method, and Return Status. The Date of the Election indicates the election you selected. County shows where you cast your ballots. The Absentee status will be displayed if you successfully return your ballot. If so, you'll see A VALID RETURN. The Return Date will show the date your vote was returned and processed. The Return Method shows how you returned your ballots. For civilians, this would say MAIL or IN PERSON. For military and foreign voters, this might say E-MAIL. The Return Status will be displayed if your ballot is RECEIVED or if there is a problem. Problem.
