Hermès Caduceus decorated with feathers. Looks like a stick with two contaillaizing snakes. wrap their bodies around it. This tattoo design can be interpreted as a fusion between good and evil, especially if one snake is painted in dark colors and the other is light. Reptiles also represent deep wisdom. As Hermes Wings represents freedom and the ability to transcend all borders and boundaries, such caduceus has always had worn by peacekeepers and was their main feature. The stick is considered a symbol of strength. At first there were two green wrapping branches around it, but later their tops turned into feathers, and the rest of the two branches now appear to be reptiles. In addition, the stick can be seen as the global axis with two snakes representing the basic opposites, such as ying and yang in Taisism. With a stick being an axis of words, the wings represent the whole superior and celestial thing and a pair of snakes represents a delicate balance in a constant and eternal battle between the forces of darkness and light. Mostly people who decided on this tattoo design choose such body positions as shoulders, ankles, or hips. It is usually made in monochromatic, much less often in a colorful palette. Many tattoo designs of Hermès Wings and Caduceus can be found on the Internet.
