Start: Seeds of Change; How did the 20th century change the ways Americans live? This program examines the early 1900s - when William McKinley was president, a loaf of bread cost only a few horsepower really meant horsepower, flying to the moon were the stuff of dreams, and the average lifespan was only 45 years - while looking ahead to the decades of changes still to come. 1914-1919 Shell Shock; The psychological damage inflicted by the stupifying bombardments of World War II has been called tracking shock, a term that aptly describes the sense of the postwar world. This program illustrates America's reluctant rise as a world power and analyzes the impact of the wholesale feeling of loss — of the life, of men and fathers, and of sacred ideals such as honor, patriotism and glory — that stemmed from the war to end all wars. 1920-1929 to bust boom; In the aftermath of the First World War, many modern-minded Americans, especially women, were eager to do away with dated traditions and demand new rights and freedoms. This program explores why the issue of women's rights, ranging from suffrage to smoking, has become so controversial — and what it has said about America's sense of self. 1929-1936 Stormy Weather; America — a nation that has claimed increasing wealth as a birthright — was rudely awakened by the Great Depression, causing 25 percent unemployment, the closure of 9,000 banks and the loss of $2.5 billion in deposits. This program captures a people's struggles as they faced the collapse of prosperity and diminished hope of being able to experience the American Dream. 1936-1941 over the rim; Safely watching Europe from across the Atlantic, many Americans observed the messianic popularity of Hitler and Mussolini and the subsequent outbreak of World War II with concern and dismay. This program explores the crucial question: can the United States withstand engagement, or would U.S. forces be sent to fight in another European war? 1941-1945 Civilians At War; World War II was the first war in history that killed more civilians than sowers, as leaders on both sides accepted nonconsistent casualties than inevitable - and for some even desirable. This program studies the courage and the power needed to face and survive starvation, bombing, torpedoing, slaughter and extinction in camps designed specifically for that purpose. 1941-1945 Home Front; The shock of Pearl Harbor woke America to its dream of isolationism. As troops went overseas and ramped up the industry to provide the urgent need for war materials, a new wave of Southern blacks migrated north and west to fill the workforce — along with millions of women, who exchanged homework for war work. This program discusses the consequences of World War II on the home front, spotlighting the war's impact as a for economic, demographic, and social change. 1946-1952 Best Years; Demobilization after World War II means tough changes as the U.S., geared for war, resumes a peacetime existence. This program describes America's new status as superpower, as the nation mustered the responsibility for rebuilding Europe and Japan — and to contain Soviet ambitions. The challenge faced by veterans and spouses to become familiar after years of separation and hardship is highlighted. 1953-1960 Happy Days; The postwar baby boom, suburban life, Marilyn Monroe, and Elvis show the contents of the Eisenhower years. But it was also years marked by rabid McCarthyism, violent civil rights demonstrations, and a terrifying secation in the Cold War. This program examines the tension between these crosscurrents in American History. 1960-1964 Poisoned Dreams; Surrounded by both international and domestic pressure, America during the Camelot years was fast approaching a political-cultural breakdown. This program documents U.S. - Soviet conflicts of interest in Cuba and Vietnam and the growing polarization at home between civil rights activists and segregationist hard-lines, which led to the Birmingham riots and the freedom march on Washington. 1965-1970 Unpinned; Riots and protests intensified in the U.S. as the war dragged on in Vietnam, with antiwar and civil rights activists seeking violent ways to agitate for peace and equality. This program provides the unrelenting anger that divided the nation during those dangerous years, as the Watts racial riots, the assassination of Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy, and the Kent State killing made headline news. 1971-1975 Approaching the Apocalypse; The trauma of the war in Vietnam and the Watergate scandal has left Americans exhausted, embittered and disillusioned with politics and politicians. This program assesses the consequences of that blight on the political landscape and its impact on the trust between government and the controlled, as essential to the well-being of a representative democracy like the United States. 1976-1980 Start Over; The women's and civil rights movements, started decades earlier and as controversial as ever, continue to evolve during the country's Bicentennial period. This program focuses on the changing momentum of feminism, hampered by its failure to ensure broad ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, and the heated confrontations that arose across affirmative action and buses. 1981-1989 A new world; The Reagan era saw the unexpected end of the Cold War and a welcome return to a booming domestic economy - but did events unfold too quickly to control? This program looks at the details and the aftershots both from the dissolution of the Soviet Union and the yuppie capitalism that threatened to push the boundaries of the U.S. economy too far. 1990-1999 Then and Now; Fifty years into the future, how will computer and communications technology take the way Americans work and play, reform? What will be the benefits and effects of biotechnology? Will dominate the third-world nations News? This program examines key moments from the '90s, reflecting on changes during the past five decades, and with the help of leading futurists, looks ahead to some of the possible events and innovations just about the horizon. horizon.
