Project Gutenberg considers that the Court has no jurisdiction in this regard, but the problem is solved, will comply. For more information about the German court case, and the reason for blocking everyone in Germany rather than unique items, visit the PGLAF information page about the German trial. For more information about the legal advice that the Gutenberg project has received on international issues, visit PGLAF's International Copyright Guide for the Gutenberg ProjectAll IP addresses in Germany are blocked. This block will remain in place until the legal guidelines are changed. Use the Maxmind GeoIP demonstration to check the status of your IP address. Project Gutenberg updates the list of IP addresses approximately monthly. Occasionally, the site misapplies a block from a previous visitor. Because the blocks are currently applied, you should try again later to visit if Maxmind displays the address as being outside Germany.If the IP address is displayed by Maxmind to be outside Germany and you have been stuck at the moment, another problem is that some Web browsers cache incorrectly block. Trying another Web browser may help. Or, clearing the history of visits to the site. Please email the diagnostic information above to (remove the spaces around @) and we will try to help. The software we use sometimes signals false positives -- that is, blocks that should neither have occurred. Apologies if this happened because human users outside Germany who make use of eBooks or other features of the site should almost never be blocked. Latest update: January 28, 2020. 2020.
