You are given 3 lives when you play Cat Mario, but when you have spent all your 3 lives, you can continue to play with negative lives. Therefore, you should try to reach the green flags before losing a life, because when you start a new life, the game will start with the farthest flag you have reached. The second stage is in the underground tunnel, so it's pretty dark. There are more monsters than the first stage. The ground under foot can suddenly decrease or the wall may suddenly fall on the head. In addition, there are fireballs at this stage. There are so many impediments that players have to overcome, which makes it harder than the first stage. In the third stage, players play on the ground again, but the ground will get higher and higher when you get to the end of the stage. Monsters become more dangerous when they are able to jump up and down that you can predict. The gap is getting bigger and bigger, so players be very careful when jumping through them, otherwise they will fall into the depths. In stage 4, the scene is completely different other stages that make players feel like they're in the abyss.
